DRAGSTER DRIVER KILLED — James Leroy Martin Allen of Route 1, Lockbourne, was killed 3:45 p. m. Sunday when the car operated by Roger W. Henson, his brother-in-law, jumped over the rear of the stripped down auto, crushing him against the dash. Deputy Sheriffs George Linder (left) and Warren Straley view the two vehicles involved.

Dragster Driver Fatally Injured

Pickaway County recorded its first fatal automobile accident of 1967 at 3:45 p. m. Sunday on the Buleen - Pierce Road 3½ miles north of Ashville.

Killed was James Leroy Martin Allen, 30, Route 1, Lockbourne who was operating a cut - down auto built for competition as a dragster. He suffered a broken neck.

1 DEAD IN 1967

Driver of the other car involved was Roger W. Henson, 21, also of Route 1, Lockbourne. The two men are brothers-in-law.

The dragster car had no body, no bumpers and the frame had been set underneath the axles to lower its center of gravity.

THE VEHICLE recently had been purchased. It was being pushed to get it started.

Deputy Sheriff Warren Straley was told by Henson that the wheels of the dragster apparently locked. His car jumped over the rear of the vehicle, crushing Allen against the dash.

Henson said the speed of the two cars was about 20 miles per hour when the accident occurred.

Nixon Advised To Study Marx

MOSCOW (AP)—A Red army major in Soviet Central Asia told Richard M. Nixon today that instead of traveling around inquiring into political conditions he should stay home and read Karl Marx.

"You should get a textbook of Marxism and you'll find it has everything you need to know," the major, a member of an army theater group, said in a good-natured meeting at the airport in Samarkand.

Nixon, U.S. vice president under President Dwight D. Eisenhower, flew back to Moscow today from Samarkand, the medieval capital of Asian empires.

Nixon has been in the Soviet Union for four days as part of an extensive tour to study political conditions. Soviet leaders refused to meet him, but in West European countries he conferred with premiers and other leaders.

Most Expensive Suit In World Costs $1,134

LONDON (AP)—"This is the most expensive suit in the world," said tailor Michael L. Hall "and it wasn't made for a Texan."

"It cost 405 pounds, or $1,134."

What's it made of, gold?

"No, but it's made of the finest wool obtainable. At that, it contains cashmere. About 20 per cent of the admixture is cashmere."

You mean the cashmere ran up the price?

"Oh, no. The cashmere was added to reduce the price."

"If this suit were made entirely of this extraordinary wool, it would have cost 500 pounds or $1,400."

Who bought it?

"An Indian gentleman who lives in London. I'm not at liberty to reveal his name, but he is, let us say, substantially built, he wanted a light, easy-fitting, expensive suit."

Hall, who cut the suit himself, is a director of one of London's most exclusive tailoring establishments, Donaldson, Williams and G. Ward.

"Let me tell you about this glorious cloth," he said. "Feel it. It's so fine, so very light, like a gentle breeze in high summer. Of the world's entire wool crop of last year, this suit represents the finest selection."

How much did the cloth cost a yard?

"It cost 100 pounds — $280 — a yard," he explained, "and we charged the customer another 100 pounds to make it up."

"It took a long time to collect this wool, a long time to spin it into yarn, a long time to weave it into cloth, and a long time to make it into a suit."

The cloth — exclusive to a Belgian wool merchant — was made in England from yarn spun by another British firm.

Because of its softness great care had to be taken in cutting it and stitching it.

"Wool of the extreme fineness necessary to reach this degree of perfection is found in such small quantities throughout the world that only 50 yards a year can be made," Hall said.

"From last year's entire Australian wool crop only one bale of this stuff was produced."

Almost lovingly the tailor stroked the cloth and said:

"You know, it's so soft he may have a hell of a time keeping those trousers pressed."

Milk Haulers Main Victims In NFO Strike

Processors and retail outlets continued to maintain that the milk-holding action aimed at forcing farmers' dairy prices up had little effect on them so far.

Campus Back To Normal At Ohio U

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—Things are back to "normal" on the Ohio University campus today and officials reported students back to classes on schedule after an early spring vacation.

Thousands of out-of-town students poured back into Athens over the weekend ready to resume classes disrupted when Alden declared spring vacation March 10, two weeks ahead of schedule.

The premature break came during a strike of food services, maintenance and custodial workers, begun March 5, settled March 15, which culminated in recognition of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO.

The union had organized 600 workers but university officials held out from permitting union dues checkoff from payrolls until state legal counsel said it would be all right. Meantime, essential services at the 15,000-student university had become so crippled that Alden termed it an emergency and called the shutdown.

Keaton Murder Case Appealed To High Court

Dayton Attorney To Ask Stay of Execution, Fees

Emanuel Nadlin, Dayton attorney who defended convicted slayer Cleo Vernon Keaton, has filed a motion with the Ohio State Supreme Court in appealing his client's conviction.

Along with the motion of appeal is one requesting a stay of execution and another asking for allowance of attorney fees for himself and a co-counsel.

Nadlin, in his motion asking the court to set attorney fees, stated that Keaton's parents, who first secured him as attorney for the defendant, could no longer afford to pay reasonable attorney fees.

The attorney for Keaton has also requested a transcript of evidence, the record and exhibits of the Fourth District Court of Appeals proceedings in the case.

Keaton was convicted Nov. 5, 1965, for the slaying of Maurice Francis of Williamsport. The killing occurred Mar. 23, 1965 just north of Williamsport.

An appeal filed with the Fourth District Court of Appeals was denied Jan. 31, 1967.

The court of appeals set an execution date of June 22, 1967.

Powell Makes Victory Talk From Bimini

BIMINI, Bahamas (AP)—Adam Clayton Powell delivered his "victory speech" on Palm Sunday but not to his huge congregation at Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist Church.

Instead of a pulpit, Powell spoke from the white coral steps of the Bimini Hotel. The message was brotherly love.

Some 72 hours before he delivered the sermon, Powell announced he had "reluctantly" decided against returning to Harlem for Palm Sunday. He said he was staying on the island because he feared his possible arrest in New York would bring violence and rioting.

At the Harlem church about 10 members of a black nationalist group who call themselves "Mau Mau" stalked out when the associate pastor, David N. Licorish, warned of "extremist elements in our midst."

The Mau Mau members had distributed leaflets at the door proclaiming their readiness to "prevent Adam Clayton Powell's arrest."

In Bimini, Powell held forth for seven minutes on a sermon entitled "Ride On, King Jesus."

He told his audience to think not of black and white but of the brotherhood of man.

"What the world needs is King Jesus to ride on until the fighting ends of Vietnam and black and whites to live together in racial harmony," he said.

His audience was composed equally of blacks and whites.

Solons OK Move On Airport Bids

The Pickaway County Commissioners indicated today they will seek bids toward construction of a local airport runway although funds for construction are not immediately available.

Their latest decision is in contrast to the position they voiced last week when they leaned towards having the money on hand before bids were advertised.

The commission's new approach resulted following a meeting before noon today with members of a joint airport action and finance committee. Spokesmen for the visiting delegation said firm bids are needed as a tool toward raising project funds on the local level.

Although they relented on their earlier stand, the lawmakers still maintained today "It's good business procedure to know money is available before bids are sought."

SEVERAL of the visiting delegates pointed out how it is common practice to seek bids before funds are on hand, including local contractor D. E. Goodchild. They said contract provisions, or actual awarding of the

Cong Troops Lose 279 Men In Attack

SAIGON (AP)—Swarms of Communist troops smashed Monday at two positions of the newest U.S. division in Vietnam and were hurled back with the loss of 279 counted dead.

Between 1,000 and 2,000 Viet Cong attacked an armored bivouac of the U.S. 9th Division north of Saigon. But after heavy fighting and air and artillery attacks, the Reds reeled back, leaving 224 bodies for U.S. bulldozers to push into mass graves.

A dozen miles southwest of Saigon a Viet Cong outfit of unknown size attempted to overrun another outpost of the 9th and left 55 dead in the battlefield.

With the war in one of the fiercest periods of fighting this year, bitter struggles were reported up and down the country. Communist gunners in one area destroyed three helicopters and damaged 13. One U.S. plane was shot down in South Vietnam Monday, another was lost on Saturday and another went down over North Vietnam Sunday.

The U.S. Command reported 29 Americans killed and 131 wounded in the past 24 hours. U.S. Air Force and Navy planes kept up their new campaign. (Continued on Page 2)

Lodge To Get Another Post

GUAM (AP)—Henry Cabot Lodge is getting a new diplomatic post as ambassador at large.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk told newsmen today that President Johnson will nominate the outgoing ambassador to South Vietnam for what amounts to an assignment as a diplomatic troubleshooter.

Lodge said he will change places with Ambassador at Large Ellsworth Bunker, Lodge's successor in Saigon.

Rusk said Lodge will work fulltime and will be much involved with Vietnamese and Southeast Asian affairs but will be available for trouble shooting chores anywhere in the world.

Before he left Saigon for the Guam conference, newsmen asked him whether he planned to join in the 1968 presidential campaign, possibly as an adviser on Vietnam to Michigan's Gov. George Romney. Lodge said, "I do not intend to get involved."

Winter Delivers Farewell Blow

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Most Ohioans who enjoyed moderate temperatures and clear weather on Palm Sunday awoke Monday morning to find snow on the ground.

It may have been Old Man Winter's way of saying farewell as the official arrival of spring comes Tuesday morning at 2:37 a. m.

The Weather Bureau in Columbus said snow accumulations would range from an inch to four inches over the state before the snow changed to rain Monday afternoon.

The snow was accompanied by temperatures in the high 40s and low 50s, which meant that what snow accumulated probably would melt.

The Highway Patrol said roads in west-central sections of Ohio were snow covered, while highways in the northeast and east-central were snow covered to wet.

Showers and thunderstorms were expected across Ohio Monday night.

Pocahontas Wasn't All She Was Supposed To Be

NEW YORK (AP)—Pocahontas, that beautiful Indian princess of American folklore, was a bigamist.

Not only that, she had enough aliases to do credit to a confidence man. Pocahontas means "playful one."

And contrary to popular belief and the history books, she did not save Capt. John Smith's life.

All this disillusioning information comes from the U.S. Travel Service, a division of the U.S. Department of Commerce, in an attempt to create interest in British-American tourism on the 350th anniversary of the Indian princess' death.

But, publicity gimmick or not, it appears that Pocahontas wasn't all she's cracked up to be.

The travel service said it found that when Pocahontas married John Rolfe, she hadn't divorced her Algonquin Indian husband — and never did.

She was baptized, and settlers felt there was no need for her to be divorced from a man they considered a heathen.

Pocahontas was called Pocahontas only in history books.

Ky Statement Contradicts Guam Intent

GUAM (AP)—President Johnson's avowed intent to focus his Guam conference on the works of peace clashed today into a call by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky for a sharp escalation of the Vietnam war.

Johnson also got a report from his own close advisers that the Communists are doing some escalating of their own.

At the first formal conference session, atop the highest hill on this damp tropical island, Ky in his opening public statement questioned whether the time had not come for the United States to bomb Hanoi, block the harbor at Haiphong and expand the war into Laos and Cambodia.

The public expressions of such questions made it apparent that Ky thinks the United States should do all those things. But both Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, meeting with newsmen after the session, emphasized repeatedly that there was no discussion of escalation. Rusk contended that Ky raised his questions only in the context that Hanoi is unwilling to seek peace.

However, both McNamara and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, said Johnson was told that the fighting in South Vietnam is becoming more intense and the Communists are stepping up the tempo of their offensive operations.

McNamara said the chief executive's military advisers reported: "The tempo of the war has increased significantly in recent weeks but, despite this fact, they believe the trend of the war is in our favor."

He said the Communists are using new weapons — rockets and bigger mortars — and are making an unsuccessful effort "to seize the initiative."

"The enemy is by no means beaten," said the defense chief, "but he is no longer capable of winning a military victory."

Rusk, McNamara and Westmoreland said several times that the afternoon of talk precluded no discussion of sending more American troops to Vietnam—above those already planned—or about specific military measures.

Rusk made one announcement to newsmen: He said Johnson will nominate Henry Cabot Lodge, who is resigning as ambassador to Saigon, to be a full-time ambassador at large, a sort of diplomatic troubleshooter. In that position he will change places with Ellsworth Bunker, who is replacing him in Saigon.

Not only that, she had enough aliases to do credit to a confidence man. Pocahontas means "playful one."

And contrary to popular belief and the history books, she did not save Capt. John Smith's life. All this disillusioning information comes from the U.S. Travel Service, a division of the U.S. Department of Commerce, in an attempt to create interest in British-American tourism on the 350th anniversary of the Indian princess' death.

But, publicity gimmick or not, it appears that Pocahontas wasn't all she's cracked up to be.

The travel service said it found that when Pocahontas married John Rolfe, she hadn't divorced her Algonquin Indian husband — and never did.

She was baptized, and settlers felt there was no need for her to be divorced from a man they considered a heathen.

Pocahontas was called Pocahontas only in history books. Indians called her Matoaka, those present at her baptism called her Rebecca, and members of King James' court, smitten by the Indian lady, called her Lady Rebecca.

Although Smith knew Pocahontas, the travel service said, the rest of the story about their relationship was strictly the dream of a 17th century public relations man who wanted to romanticize Smith's voyage to the New World.

In any event, Smith did nothing to dispel the story and actually came to enjoy his reputation as a living example of Indian compassion.

So far as the rest of the travel service version of the story goes, Pocahontas died of smallpox in England on March 10, 1617 and was buried in the graveyard at Gravesend Church in London.

The church underwent renovation in the 19th century and some of the headstones got mixed up. So the exact location of the grave remains a mystery.

Ky Statement Contradicts Guam Intent

GUAM (AP)—President Johnson's avowed intent to focus his Guam conference on the works of peace clashed today into a call by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky for a sharp escalation of the Vietnam war.

Johnson also got a report from his own close advisers that the Communists are doing some escalating of their own.

At the first formal conference session, atop the highest hill on this damp tropical island, Ky in his opening public statement questioned whether the time had not come for the United States to bomb Hanoi, block the harbor at Haiphong and expand the war into Laos and Cambodia.

The public expressions of such questions made it apparent that Ky thinks the United States should do all those things. But both Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, meeting with newsmen after the session, emphasized repeatedly that there was no discussion of escalation. Rusk contended that Ky raised his questions only in the context that Hanoi is unwilling to seek peace.

However, both McNamara and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the U.S. commander in Vietnam, said Johnson was told that the fighting in South Vietnam is becoming more intense and the Communists are stepping up the tempo of their offensive operations.

McNamara said the chief executive's military advisers reported: "The tempo of the war has increased significantly in recent weeks but, despite this fact, they believe the trend of the war is in our favor."

He said the Communists are using new weapons — rockets and bigger mortars — and are making an unsuccessful effort "to seize the initiative."

"The enemy is by no means beaten," said the defense chief, "but he is no longer capable of winning a military victory."

Rusk, McNamara and Westmoreland said several times that the afternoon of talk produced no discussion of sending more American troops to Vietnam—above those already planned—or about specific military measures.

Rusk made one announcement to newsmen: He said Johnson will nominate Henry Cabot Lodge, who is resigning as ambassador to Saigon, to be a full-time ambassador at large, a sort of diplomatic troubleshooter. In that position he will change places with Ellsworth Bunker, who is replacing him in Saigon.

Man Charged With Murder

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—First-degree murder charges were filed by the Athens County sheriff while the accused lay hospitalized, under police guard, after his estranged wife was slain while telephoning the sheriff's office here Sunday.

Mrs. Evelyn Keller, about 28, was shot four times in the back and once in the arm at her parents' home near New Marshfield, Athens County, officers discovered after the phone there went dead and they rushed to the place. Shots and screams had been heard over the line before it was cut off.

Several hours later, Charles Keller, 34, from whom the victim separated about a month ago, was found in front of the house he owns five miles west of Pomeroy, Meigs County. He was unconscious in his auto, with the doors locked.

Apparently overcome by carbon monoxide, Keller was taken to Pomeroy where his condition later was listed as critical.

Road Toll 17 For Weekend

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least 17 persons were killed in Ohio motor vehicle accidents over the weekend, eight of them pedestrians, although the state escaped without a multiple fatality occurring.

Dayton alone marked up three pedestrian deaths in and near the city; Columbus two.

Freight accidents found a trucker run over by a fellow worker's truck, another truck driver pinned against a wall when his own parked truck rolled into him, and a man trying out a recently obtained dragster killed in it when it stalled and an auto pushing from behind ran up onto the "skeleton" vehicle.

It was winter's final weekend, and the toll for the 54-hour Friday night through Sunday night period approximated the weekly average for the season.

Market Backs Down Again

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market early this afternoon backed away irregularly from 1967 highs posted toward the end of last week. Trading was fairly active.

Pessimism over the labor contract negotiations in the auto industry, even though they don't begin until July, generated fears of an auto strike.

The market was slightly higher at the start but the popular averages showed losses by noon. Gainers held the edge over losers throughout the morning but the margin was gradually cut back to a thin one.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .3 at 323.5 with industrials off .6, rails up .1 and utilities off .5.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 2.18 at 867.39.

Cong Troops

paign against North Vietnam's industrial heartland, now in its second week. Sunday they bombed two thermal power plants and the steel fabricating plant at Thai Nguyen and Viet Tri, 29 to 38 miles north of Hanoi. All had been hit before.

The 9th Infantry Division, which is the freshest in Vietnam, arriving only last December, covered itself with glory in its sharpest fighting yet.

One of its armored units of about 300 men bedded down Sunday night at the village of Bau Bang on bloody Route 13, some 31 miles north of Saigon, the scene of at least three attempted Viet Cong ambushes in the past 18 months.

At midnight Red mortar fire began to fall and within minutes an estimated 1,000 to 2,000 Viet Cong were dashing in. Some were screaming "Americans die" and swirling around the encircled units in wild assaults which the GIs later compared to an Indian attack on a Western wagon train.

American warplanes streaked down by flarelight within an hour to plaster the assaulting Viet Cong with clusters of anti-personnel bombs. Another armored column plowed up the road to join the fight.

When the battered Viet Cong commander pulled his men back at dawn, their retreat was marked with foot-wide ribbons of blood.

The 9th Division battle near Rach Kien, south of Saigon, was the same thing on a smaller scale.

The two fights cost the 9th Division 15 dead and 79 wounded, U.S. spokesmen reported.

The heavy loss of helicopters came in Operation Junction City where U.S. infantrymen in the biggest sweep of the war are attempting to clear out a long-time Red stronghold along the Cambodian frontier.

A strong force was sent Sunday to a landing zone which had supposedly been cleared by a 400-round artillery barrage. Settling into the zone, the chopper force came under machine-gun fire, and the Communists detonated two artillery shells which had been wired as booby traps in the middle of the zone. In the melee, three choppers were destroyed, 13 damaged by bullets or shell fragments, eight soldiers were killed and nine were wounded.

"Enemy casualties are unknown," the U.S. communique added.

first round of talks was on the civilian side — political processes, pacification, economic matters. He said talk of military affairs was confined to a brief report.

He stressed twice that, as he sees it, the government of South Vietnam is in full accord with the search for peace.

McNamara said despite the new Communist offensive moves, their efforts have been unsuccessful, their morale is suffering and their losses are running 60 per cent higher than a year ago.

Westmoreland said that in the past year, Communist losses from all causes have doubled, the number of prisoners taken has increased fourfold, defectors have doubled, their losses of weapons are two and a half times higher, and only half of their 134 maneuver battalions are fully combat effective.

Johnson had indicated in advance that his main purpose at the Guam conference would be to discuss the works of peace. He told the opening session of the two-nation conference that more effective efforts are required on all fronts — military, social, economic and political.

Ky responded by rejecting the idea of ever admitting representatives of the National Liberation Front—the political arm of the Viet Cong—to any coalition government that might take power in Saigon after peace talks.

The dapper little premier was equally pointed in a series of questions all in effect calling for a major escalation of the U. S. war effort.

Said Ky: "How long can Hanoi enjoy the advantage of restricted bombing of military targets? How long can the Viet Cong be permitted to take sanctuary in Cambodia, be allowed to regroup and come back at their will? How long can the North be permitted to infiltrate soldiers and weapons across the demarcation line?"

The American delegation meeting with the Vietnamese on Nimitz Hill, the U. S. Navy headquarters overlooking the island, included Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and Ellsworth Bunker, who soon will replace Lodge in Saigon.

Leading the Vietnamese, who will fly home Tuesday, were Ky and chief of state Nguyen Van Thieu.

The valve of a dairy tanker was opened in Scioto County and handlers there, and in Ashland County, reported instances of being halted on the highways. Some said air was let out of truck tires.

And there were scattered Ohio reports of bulk milk tankers being blocked by NFO men's vehicles stationed at driveway exits.

The NFO's Ohio president, Ed Sasey of Mantua, Portage County, maintained that the organization "does not condone or advocate violence; members have been instructed to conduct the withholding action in an atmosphere of calmness."

Man Charged With Murder

ATHENS, Ohio (AP)—First-degree murder charges were filed by the Athens County sheriff while the accused lay hospitalized, under police guard, after his estranged wife was slain while telephoning the sheriff's office here Sunday.

Mrs. Evelyn Keller, about 28, was shot four times in the back and once in the arm at her parents' home near New Marshfield, Athens County, officers discovered after the phone there went dead and they rushed to the place. Shots and screams had been heard over the line before it was cut off.

Several hours later, Charles Keller, 34, from whom the victim separated about a month ago, was found in front of the house he owns five miles west of Pomeroy, Meigs County. He was unconscious in his auto, with the doors locked.

Apparently overcome by carbon monoxide, Keller was taken to Pomeroy where his condition later was listed as critical.

Road Toll 17 For Weekend

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
At least 17 persons were killed in Ohio motor vehicle accidents over the weekend, eight of them pedestrians, although the state escaped without a multiple fatality occurrence.

Dayton alone marked up three pedestrian deaths in and near the city; Columbus two.

Freak accidents found a trucker run over by a fellow worker's truck, another truck driver pinned against a wall when his own parked truck rolled into him, and a man trying out a recently obtained dragster killed in it when it stalled and an auto pushing from behind ran up onto the "skeleton" vehicle.

It was winter's final weekend, and the toll for the 54-hour Friday night through Sunday night period approximated the weekly average for the season.

Market Backs Down Again

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market early this afternoon backed away irregularly from 1967 highs posted toward the end of last week. Trading was fairly active.

Pessimism over the labor contract negotiations in the auto industry, even though they don't begin until July, generated fears of an auto strike.

The market was slightly higher at the start but the popular averages showed losses by noon. Gainers held the edge over losers throughout the morning but the margin was gradually cut back to a thin one.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off .3 at 323.5 with industrials off .6, rails up .1 and utilities off .5. The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 2.18 at 867.59.

paign against North Vietnam's industrial heartland, now in its second week. Sunday they bombed two thermal power plants and the steel fabricating plant at Thai Nguyen and Viet Tri, 29 to 38 miles north of Hanoi. All had been hit before.

The 9th Infantry Division, which is the freshest in Vietnam, arriving only last December, covered itself with glory in its sharpest fighting yet.

One of its armored units of about 300 men bedded down Sunday night at the village of Bau Bang on bloody Route 13, some 31 miles north of Saigon, the scene of at least three attempted Viet Cong ambushes in the past 18 months.

At midnight Red mortar fire began to fall and within minutes an estimated 1,000 to 2,000 Viet Cong were dashing in. Some were screaming "Americans die" and swirling around the encircled units in wild assaults which the GIs later compared to an Indian attack on a Western wagon train.

American warplanes streaked down by flarelight within an hour to plaster the assaulting Viet Cong with clusters of anti-personnel bombs. Another armored column plowed up the road to join the fight.

When the battered Viet Cong commander pulled his men back at dawn, their retreat was marked with foot-wide ribbons of blood.

The 9th Division battle near Rach Kien, south of Saigon, was the same thing on a smaller scale.

The two fights cost the 9th Division 15 dead and 79 wounded, U.S. spokesmen reported.

The heavy loss of helicopters came in Operation Junction City where U.S. infantrymen in the biggest sweep of the war are attempting to clear out a long-time Red stronghold along the Cambodian frontier.

A strong force was sent Sunday to a landing zone which had supposedly been cleared by a 400-round artillery barrage. Settling into the zone, the chopper force came under machine-gun fire, and the Communists detonated two artillery shells which had been wired as booby traps in the middle of the zone. In the melee, three choppers were destroyed, 13 damaged by bullets or shell fragments, eight soldiers were killed and nine were wounded.

"Enemy casualties are unknown," the U.S. communique added.

Ky Statement

first round of talks was on the civilian side — political processes, pacification, economic matters. He said talk of military affairs was confined to a brief report.

He stressed twice that, as he sees it, the government of South Vietnam is in full accord with the search for peace.

McNamara said despite the new Communist offensive moves, their efforts have been unsuccessful, their morale is suffering and their losses are running 60 per cent higher than a year ago.

Westmoreland said that in the past year, Communist losses from all causes have doubled, the number of prisoners taken has increased fourfold, defectors have doubled, their losses of weapons are two and a half times higher, and only half of their 134 maneuver battalions are fully combat effective.

Johnson had indicated in advance that his main purpose at the Guam conference would be to discuss the works of peace. He told the opening session of the two-nation conference that more effective efforts are required on all fronts — military, social, economic and political.

Ky responded by rejecting the idea of ever admitting representatives of the National Liberation Front—the political arm of the Viet Cong—to any coalition government that might take power in Saigon after peace talks.

The dapper little premier was equally pointed in a series of questions all in effect calling for a major escalation of the U. S. war effort.

Said Ky: "How long can Hanoi enjoy the advantage of restricted bombing of military targets? How long can the Viet Cong be permitted to take sanctuary in Cambodia, be allowed to regroup and come back at their will? How long can the North be permitted to infiltrate soldiers and weapons across the demarcation line?"

The American delegation meeting with the Vietnamese on Nimitz Hill, the U. S. Navy headquarters overlooking the island, included Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Richard Helms, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and Ellsworth Bunker, who soon will replace Lodge in Saigon.

Leading the Vietnamese, who will fly home Tuesday, were Ky and chief of state Nguyen Van Thieu.

Congress Ready To Take Recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — With its two misconduct cases temporarily simmering on back burners, Congress prepares to get out of the kitchen altogether for a 10-day Easter recess.

The exodus is scheduled to come Thursday after a short-end work week which is expected to produce little final action.

The Senate takes up today a $12.2-billion supplemental appropriation bill for the defense and the Vietnam War, providing another chance for critics of President Johnson's war policies to get in a few licks.

But like the first 10 weeks of the session, proposals and arguments are likely to pile up far faster than actual legislative solutions to problems.

The Senate Ethics Committee may begin considering in private the open testimony it took last week on the case of Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., who is accused of using campaign funds for private purposes

Spring Near, At Least Calendar Says

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Spring arrives in Ohio at 2:37 a. m. Tuesday ending a winter of heavy snows and mild temperatures.

The winter's sharp contrasts are illustrated by a nine-inch snow in Cincinnati March 6 followed by record 80-degree temperatures one week later.

"Each time we had snow we ended up with considerable melting and mild weather with a little rain, so the accumulations were not prolonged," said Howard Kenny, chief U.S. Weather Bureau meteorologist in Columbus.

Even 24 hours before spring was to set in, rain, sleet, freezing rain and snow were reported around the state. Up to four inches of snow was predicted for some areas today.

And while most of Ohio actually had comparatively few days with snow covering on the ground, the 42.3 inches of snow in Columbus was the greatest since the blizzard winter of 1930-31.

Unusually heavy snowfall was general in most of Ohio, except for the northeastern section — usually the snowiest part of the state, Kenny said.

Cleveland, for instance, usually gets 50 inches of snow, but was three inches short of that this winter.

A blizzard Nov. 2-3 paralyzed the western third of the state with up to 15 inches of snow to start the winter. "Never before has such a heavy snowstorm occurred so early in November," said State Climatologist Marvin Millard.

November and February were the big snow months in contrast to the averages, which make January the wettest month.

January this year "turned out to be exceptionally dry — almost a drought condition," Kenny said. Millard noted it took 42 days after Dec. 11 for the state to get an average of one inch of moisture. Normally at that time of year, the state averages an inch of moisture every 13 days, he said.

Cincinnati's 27-inch snowfall this winter was eight inches above normal. But 17 inches of that snow came during the November blizzard and the March storm.

March snowfall in Central Ohio was nearly double normal — 10 inches in Columbus.

Kenny said that while snowfall records were set or approached in many parts of the state, the winter was unlike other big snow seasons because of the comparatively mild temperatures.

In snowfall, this winter compared to the winters of 1960-61 (42.2 inches of snow); 1950-51 (43.4 inches) and 1917-18 (43.9) though it did not approach the alltime snow champion of 1909-10 when 67.8 inches fell.

But all those earlier big snow years were marked by bitter cold and prolonged snow cover in addition to blizzard falls like the one in 1950 which created the famed "snow bowl" football game between Ohio State and Michigan.

This year Ohio had the big snows, Kenny said, "but they were interspersed with almost springlike conditions."

Spring Near, At Least Calendar Says

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Spring arrives in Ohio at 2:37 a. m. Tuesday ending a winter of heavy snows and mild temperatures.

The winter's sharp contrasts are illustrated by a nine-inch snow in Cincinnati March 6 followed by record 80-degree temperatures one week later.

"Each time we had snow we ended up with considerable melting and mild weather with a little rain, so the accumulations were not prolonged," said Howard Kenny, chief U.S. Weather Bureau meteorologist in Columbus.

Even 24 hours before spring was to set in, rain, sleet, freezing rain and snow were reported around the state. Up to four inches of snow was predicted for some areas today.

And while most of Ohio actually had comparatively few days with snow covering on the ground, the 42.3 inches of snow in Columbus was the greatest since the blizzard winter of 1950-51.

Unusually heavy snowfall was general in most of Ohio, except for the northeastern section — usually the snowiest part of the state, Kenny said.

Cleveland, for instance, usually gets 50 inches of snow, but was three inches short of that this winter.

A blizzard Nov. 23 paralyzed the western third of the state with up to 15 inches of snow to start the winter. "Never before has such a heavy snowstorm occurred so early in November," said State Climatologist Marvin Millard.

November and February were the big snow months in contrast to the averages, which make January the wettest month.

January this year "turned out to be exceptionally dry . . . almost a drought condition," Kenny said. Millard noted it took 42 days after Dec. 11 for the state to get an average of one inch of moisture. Normally at that time of year, the state averages an inch of moisture every 13 days, he said.

Cincinnati's 27-inch snowfall this winter was eight inches above normal. But 17 inches of that snow came during the November blizzard and the March storm.

March snowfall in Central Ohio was nearly double normal — 10 inches in Columbus.

Kenny said that while snowfall records were set or approached in many parts of the state, the winter was unlike other big snow seasons because of the comparatively mild temperatures.

In snowfall, this winter compared to the winters of 1960-61 (42.2 inches of snow); 1950-51 (43.4 inches) and 1917-18 (43.9) though it did not approach the all-time snow champion of 1909-10 when 67.8 inches fell.

But all those earlier big snow years were marked by bitter cold and prolonged snow cover in addition to blizzard falls like the one in 1950 which created the famed "snow bowl" football game between Ohio State and Michigan.

This year Ohio had the big snows, Kenny said, "but they were interspersed with almost springlike conditions."

Our Shipping Plight

The Department of Transportation, the latest adjunct to President Johnson's cabinet, does not include the Maritime Administration.

Another attempt, however, is to be made by the White House to put the maritime agency under control of the department along with air, rail and highway transport. When the new department was established last fall, Congress rejected a provision which would have transferred maritime affairs from the Commerce Department's jurisdiction.

The President reluctantly signed the transportation act minus the Maritime Administration, but he expressed the hope that as the new department gained experience, Congress would "re-examine its decision."

The White House now apparently believes that by 1972, the Transportation Department will have had sufficient experience to warrant taking over the maritime agency. To this end, Transportation Secretary Alan S. Boyd has been in Bal Harbour, Fla., trying to sell to maritime leaders in session there a five-year program that would enable the Maritime Administration's the Merit Administration's switch.

But perhaps more important than the change in jurisdiction are other proposals in the $2.5 billion program which could help the United States regain its position as a major maritime nation.

These include overhauling 100 moth-balled ships in the Reserve Fleet, reconditioning about 150 Victory ships being operated to Vietnam by Military Sea Transportation Service, construction of 15 new ships annually in United States shipyards and for the first time, subsidies for U. S. - flag ship built in lower-cost foreign yards.

Shipping Operators reportedly are friendly to the new program. The big task is to overcome opposition from unions whose lobbying against last fall's maritime legislation was largely responsible for its failure.

Since World War II, the American merchant marine has forfeited its leadership, with Soviet Russia fast coming up in front. Escalation of the Vietnam War has escalated this sorry state.

American merchant marine policy has been bankrupt for so long, that a change in management is clearly indicated. Even the young and untired Transportation Department can do no worse than the Commerce Department.

Should We Wait?

By John Chamberlain

As events move along in the Far East, it should be more and more apparent that Lyndon Johnson's temporizing policy toward those reported moves toward a cease-fire in Vietnam is, paradoxically, a form of very effective action. The tremendous left-of-center drive to get us to suspend the bombing of North Vietnam is evidence that Ho Chi Minh wants to insure peace on terms favorable to himself before his rear in Red China is so enveloped in the developing chaos that, far from being the engaged "front" for Mao Tse-tung's proposed guerrilla encirclement of the West, he will be left high and dry. Lyndon Johnson, the "can do" man, is frustrating Ho just by emulating Ol' Man River: "He must know somethin', but don't say nuthin', he just keeps rollin' along."

Bobby Kennedy is annoyed; he wants a quick peace in Vietnam, and a "positive" policy toward Red China. But Professor David Rowe of Yale, who has had a better record of prediction about the Far East than any other U. S. "expert," tells me that now is the time to sit tight and stay mum in our Oriental relations. Any interference by Washington in Red Chinese internal affairs would, he says, play into the hands of the Communists. The same thing goes for Chiang Kai-shek on Taiwan: Chiang should, says Rowe, keep his posture of watchful waiting.

What has happened in Red China is that Mao Tse-tung and Lin Piao, his heir apparent, have bitten off more than they can ever chew. But it would not be to the West's advantage to help topple Mao prematurely. This would play into the hands of the "Russian party" in Red China. A victory for Mao's enemy, Liu Shao-chi, would restore a Communist United Front from the Baltic to the Pacific. Then the pressure would really be on to Communize South-east Asia and intimidate Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Indonesia, and the Philippines. Mao can't win in China, and presumably the "Russian party" can't win either. But interference by the U. S. or by Chiang Kai-shek would hardly move the situation along, and might temporarily serve to unify the mainland against "imperialists." It is an old axiom that the East can't be hurried. China, says Professor Rowe, is not a volcano; it moves like a glacier.

Glacial movement, for us, should be enough, for the peasantry, which constitutes eighty per cent of the country, can't be pushed back into pure Communism. Along with the old Communist Party machine, though with a different "revisionist" end in mind, the peasants have successfully resisted the "cultural revolution."

They have stolidly endured through four changes since 1949. First, there was the touted "land reform." The old landlords were expropriated, and pieces were parcelled out to the peasants. But the pieces were too small to be profitable, so cooperatives were formed. When this didn't feed China, Mao instituted the period of the communes. But when production still failed to pick up, there was a retreat toward restitution of private plots.

Having been through the cycle once, the peasants are not likely to play ball with Mao in his attempt to revert to agricultural Communism. They obviously aren't getting ready for the sort of spring planting that is needed to feed 700 million people. The Red Guards have had their effect in the cities, but they haven't been able to take over the countryside for Mao. So now, with famine looming as a possibility for next winter, Mao has had to tell Chou En-lai to put things up and put the peasants back in a planting mood.

It may work for the short run. But Professor Rowe is certain that Mao Tse-tung has made at least 100 million new enemies in Red China since last August. The 12 million Communist Party members have, in effect, been told they can't be trusted. Dissidents in the armed forces have good reason to fear a Mao success. The official Communist Youth movement was insulted when Mao turned to the eighteen-year-old Red Guards. The new hostility may be driven underground for a period. But Humpty Dumpty in China won't be put together again.

So we should wait, and Chiang Kai-shek should wait, and Ho Chi Minh, the Red revolutionary advance man in North Vietnam, should be kept on the hook. And Lyndon Johnson should continue to be Ol' Man River.

You're Telling Me

Experts of the University of Michigan's dental school are studying X-ray photos of the teeth of some 40 Egyptian Pharaohs to trace any possible evolutionary changes in human choppers since many centuries B.C. It's a new kind of gumshoe work.

Not a single set of false teeth has been found among the ex-royalties though all were very rich guys. Good reason — in their time store choppers had not yet been invented.

Dentistry was virtually unknown in those days and Pharaohs who got a toothache had a bad time of it. Maybe they invented the word "Ouch!"

Some of the Pharaohs, the X-rays show, had teeth badly worn apparently caused by chewing coarse food. It would seem that in those olden times a king's table was seldom set with what today we would call a royal feast.

One of the Pharaohs was Ramesses II whose daughter found Moses in the bullrushes and rescued him. A Girl Scout's good deed if there ever was one.

Still another was Menephtah of unbeloved memory because he was the one who cruelly chased the Israelites out of Egypt. It could be he was really suffering from a humdinger of a toothache at the time!

JEROME KERN, who wrote some of the most beautiful melodies of our time ("Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "Who," "And When I Tell Them," and "Just the Way You Look Tonight") was, with justification, a complete autocrat backstage. Woe betide any lyricist or songwriter who tried to tamper with his tempo, or change a single note!

"It's easy to intimidate people," admitted Kern. "When they're trying to make you change anything, all you have to do is look them straight in the eye and demand, 'WHY?' That almost always stops them dead in their tracks."

Woody Allen knows a man who has built up a fine business as caterer to wedding parties, and is particularly proud of innovations he has introduced thereto. One of his boasts is, "I am the only caterer ever to make a miniature groom out of potato salad."

Friends of the late Robert Benchley remember the day he returned from an inspection of one of Italy's most famous monasteries. "It was splendid," he reported, "but it lacked the woman's touch."

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

How can you tell if a pain in the abdomen is serious enough to call a doctor?

Pains in the abdomen can be caused, in the child or adult, by many conditions. Most of them are simple and uncomplicated. Constipation, indigestion or over-indulgence in food or drink may be responsible for abdominal pain. The duration of the pain is probably the best guide to the seriousness of the condition.

When abdominal pain is associated with fever, nausea and vomiting there should be no delay in calling the doctor. The diagnosis of acute appendicitis, gall-bladder disease and stones in the kidneys demands tremendous training and judgment. The physician is often baffled in his effort to track down the cause of abdominal distress.

A good, safe rule is to describe to your doctor by phone the symptoms and let him, with his excellent discrimination, make the decision as to whether or not you should be examined. Keeping in touch with him every few hours prevents any long lapse of time that only invites complications.

Should a person with epilepsy who is being treated and controlled, let her co-workers know about the condition?

Epilepsy is a disorder which bears no shame or stigma. Thousands of remarkable children, young adults in colleges and mature adults in business are productive human beings with pride in their accomplishments.

Epilepsy is not a social disease that should be kept hidden or secreted. It has no bearing on the dignity or level of attainment in any branch of society.

It is imperative that friends, classmates and business associates know about the condition so that they can be ready to help if, despite treatment a seizure should occur.

There was a time when the epileptic was afraid to reveal his illness for fear that he would not be employed if his condition were known. Fortunately, we have graduated from those "dark ages" of discrimination and ignorance and now offer the greatest encouragement to these courageous people.

By John Cuniff

NEW YORK (AP) — The present economic slowdown is very clearly shown by half a dozen indicators. Curiously, though, the nation's employment figures show little change at all. They remain strong.

At 3.7 per cent, the jobless ratio in February remained steady for the third month in a row, dispelling some of the feeling that it sank that low in the first place merely because the nation was over-producing.

This interpretation no longer seems to have weight. It now seems that the rate of unemployment during the past year, low as it was, really didn't give an adequate measure of the intense demand for workers.

The evidence seems to indicate that even more workers could have been employed if they had the proper skills. But, since these jobs went unfilled, the demand was channeled into overtime hours instead.

This overtime still averages more than three hours a month in manufacturing but is now dropping. Its existence, however, is still a cushion against layoffs. Hours are cut before jobs are eliminated.

The most serious blemish on the sparkling job figures is the rate of non-white joblessness — 7.1 per cent compared to 3.3 per cent for whites. This is a serious, persistent problem, with consequences throughout society.

Aside from this major problem, the outlook for the immediate future seems to be good also, despite the slowing of the productive pace. In fact, there is some slight evidence of even more pressure on employers to find workers.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Miss Lucille Dumm became the first woman to serve on the Pickaway County Board of Elections after being appointed by the Republican Executive Committee.

The Junior Women's Club presented Dr. Richard Hackert, manager of the local Du Pont plant and Judge William Radcliff as speakers when the organization hosted District Seven of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs at an annual Legislation Day meeting in Circleville.

Tom Rathbun of Ashville, winner of the annual Bob Bowsher Memorial Award for 1962 and Chuck Spangler of Logan Elm were named to the second team Associated Press Class A All-Ohio Basketball selection.

TEN YEARS AGO

Richard Bowers was named Exalted Leader of the Circleville Elks Lodge.

City Auditor Lillian Young made a financial report for the first 18 days in March which was submitted to city council by son George Crites.

Mrs. Doyle Painter and Mrs. Howard Snook were co-hostesses when the Circleville Newcomers Club met in the Painter home.

Twenty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Austin Wilson received word that their son, PFC Wayne Wilson who served in the finance department of the Air Corps, had arrived safely in Australia.

Revival Services at E. Ringgold Church were underway with The Rev. O. F. Gibbs as evangelist.

Finger printing of employees who work in Civil Defense industries was one of the programs being instituted in the city, according to Police Chief William McCrady.

A BIT OF PHILOSOPHY

DR. HERMAN H. SHUTTLEWORTH

Even though the following thought does not apply to the chiropractic principle, it does apply to life and you may enjoy reading it.

Every violation of intellectual honesty in your life is a hindrance. Falsehoods, half-truths and exaggerations may have their hour . . . but have no future. The logic of facts is stronger than any other logic. Always use intellectual honesty, based on all the facts. It is a trade mark that does not have to be registered, just as the sun does not need a designation to distinguish it from darkness.

And beware a half-truth. Even though "the whole truth" might be a misnomer, because nothing that passes through the sieve of prejudice can be really "whole" it is, nevertheless, indispensable to a successful life as well as peace of mind and joy of living, to be at least honest with yourself.

Abraham Lincoln, (whose birthday we observed last month), insisted on facts when a case was being presented to him. One day a committee set forth a case built largely on "supposings." Mr. Lincoln asked them, "How many legs would a cow have if you called its tail a leg?" . . . "Five," was the immediate answer. "That's what I thought you would say," declared Lincoln, "but that isn't true; the cow would have only four legs. Calling a tail a leg doesn't make it one."

People who cannot be intellectually objective need counseling. People who are emotionally unstable cannot reason objectively, and should, therefore, try hard to recognize this inadequacy and try to correct it. They should study and know themselves enough to at least not impose their inaccurate judgments on others.

We are all guilty of prejudice. We are all guilty of false viewpoints as they relate to reality. We are all even guilty of some untruths in our lifetime. But the biggest guilt of all is intellectual dishonesty as a policy of life. For this policy of living carries with it the seed of its own destruction. No permanently successful life, certainly no permanently happy life, was ever developed and continued on anything but intellectual honesty.

Should a person with epilepsy who is being treated and controlled, let her co-workers know about the condition?

Epilepsy is a disorder which bears no shame or stigma. Thousands of remarkable children, young adults in colleges and mature adults in business are productive human beings with pride in their accomplishments.

Epilepsy is not a social disease that should be kept hidden or secreted. It has no bearing on the dignity or level of attainment in any branch of society.

It is imperative that friends, classmates and business associates know about the condition so that they can be ready to help if, despite treatment a seizure should occur.

There was a time when the epileptic was afraid to reveal his illness for fear that he would not be employed if his condition were known. Fortunately, we have graduated from those "dark ages" of discrimination and ignorance and now offer the greatest encouragement to these courageous people.

Our Shipping Plight

The Department of Transportation, the latest adjunct to President Johnson's cabinet, does not include the Maritime Administration.

Another attempt, however, is to be made by the White House to put the maritime agency under control of the department along with air, rail and highway transport. When the new department was established last fall, Congress rejected a provision which would have transferred maritime affairs from the Commerce Department's jurisdiction.

The President reluctantly signed the transportation act minus the Maritime Administration, but he expressed the hope that as the new department gained experience, Congress would "re-examine its decision."

The White House now apparently believes that by 1972, the Transportation Department will have had sufficient experience to warrant taking over the maritime agency. To this end, Transportation Secretary Alan S. Boyd has been in Bal Harbour, Fla., trying to sell to maritime leaders in session there a five-year program that would enable the Maritime Administration's the Merit Administration's switch.

But perhaps more important than the change in jurisdiction are other proposals in the $2.5 billion program which could help the United States regain its position as a major maritime nation.

These include overhauling 100 mothballed ships in the Reserve Fleet, reconditioning about 150 Victory ships being operated to Vietnam by Military Sea Transportation Service, construction of 15 new ships annually in United States shipyards and for the first time, subsidies for U. S. - flag ship built in lower-cost foreign yards.

Shipping Operators reportedly are friendly to the new program. The big task is to overcome opposition from unions whose lobbying against last fall's maritime legislation was largely responsible for its failure.

Since World War II, the American merchant marine has forfeited its leadership, with Soviet Russia fast coming up in front. Escalation of the Vietnam War has escalated this sorry state.

American merchant marine policy has been bankrupt for so long, that a change in management is clearly indicated. Even the young and untried Transportation Department can do no worse than the Commerce Department.

Should We Wait?

As events move along in the Far East, it should be more and more apparent that Lyndon Johnson's temporizing policy toward those reported moves toward a cease-fire in Vietnam is, paradoxically, a form of very effective action. The tremendous left-of-center drive to get us to suspend the bombing of North Vietnam is evidence that Ho Chi Minh wants to insure peace on terms favorable to himself before his rear in Red China is so enveloped in the developing chaos that, far from being the engaged "front" for Mao Tse-tung's proposed guerrilla encirclement of the West, he will be left high and dry. Lyndon Johnson, the "can do" man, is frustrating Ho just by emulating Ol' Man River: "He must know something, but don't say nuthin', he just keeps rollin' along."

Bobby Kennedy is annoyed; he wants a quick peace in Vietnam, and a "positive" policy toward Red China. But Professor David Rowe of Yale, who has had a better record of prediction about the Far East than any other U. S. "expert," tells me that now is the time to sit tight and stay mum in our Oriental relations. Any interference by Washington in Red Chinese internal affairs would, he says, play into the hands of the Communists. The same thing goes for Chiang Kai-shek on Taiwan: Chiang should, says Rowe, keep his posture of watchful waiting.

What has happened in Red China is that Mao Tse-tung and Lin Piao, his heir apparent, have bitten off more than they can ever chew. But it would not be to the West's advantage to help topple Mao prematurely. This would play into the hands of the "Russian party" in Red China. A victory for Mao's enemy, Liu Shao-chi, would restore a Communist United Front from the Baltic to the Pacific. Then the pressure would really be on to Communize Southeast Asia and intimidate Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Indonesia, and the Philippines. Mao can't win in China, and presumably the "Russian party" can't win either. But interference by the U. S. or by Chiang Kai-shek would hardly move the situation along, and might temporarily serve to unify the mainland against "imperialists." It is an old axiom that the East can't be hurried. China, says Professor Rowe, is not a volcano; it moves like a glacier.

Glacial movement, for us, should be enough, for the peasantry, which constitutes eighty per cent of the country, can't be pushed back into pure Communism. Along with the old Communist Party machine, though with a different "revisionist" end in mind, the peasants have successfully resisted the "cultural revolution."

They have solidly endured through four changes since 1949. First, there was the touted "land reform." The old landlords were expropriated, and pieces were parcelled out to the peasants. But the pieces were too small to be profitable, so cooperatives were formed. When this didn't feed China, Mao instituted the period of the communes. But when production still failed to pick up, there was a retreat toward restitution of private plots.

Having been through the cycle once, the peasants are not likely to play ball with Mao in his attempt to revert to agricultural Communism. They obviously aren't getting ready for the sort of spring planting that is needed to feed 700 million people. The Red Guards have had their effect in the cities, but they haven't been able to take over the countryside for Mao. So now, with famine looming as a possibility for next winter, Mao has had to tell Chou En-lai to patch things up and put the peasants back in a planting mood.

It may work for the short run. But Professor Rowe is certain that Mao Tse-tung has made at least 100 million new enemies in Red China since last August. The 12 million Communist Party members have, in effect, been told they can't be trusted. Dissidents in the armed forces have good reason to fear a Mao success. The official Communist Youth movement was insulted when Mao turned to the eighteen-year-old Red Guards. The new hostility may be driven underground for a period. But Humpty Dumpty in China won't be put together again.

So we should wait, and Chiang Kai-shek should wait, and Ho Chi Minh, the Red revolutionary advance man in North Vietnam, should be kept on the hook. And Lyndon Johnson should continue to be Ol' Man River.

Experts of the University of Michigan's dental school are studying X-ray photos of the teeth of some 40 Egyptian Pharaohs to trace any possible evolutionary changes in human choppers since many centuries B.C. It's a new kind of gum-shoe work.

Not a single set of false teeth has been found among the ex-royalties though all were very rich guys. Good reason—in their time store choppers had not yet been invented.

Dentistry was virtually unknown in those days and Pharaohs who got a toothache had a bad time of it. Maybe they invented the word "Ouch!"

Some of the Pharaohs, the X-rays show, had teeth badly worn apparently caused by chewing coarse food. It would seem that in those olden times a king's table was seldom set with what today we would call a royal feast.

One of the Pharaohs was Ramesses II whose daughter found Moses in the bullrushes and rescued him. A Bull Scout's good deed if there ever was one.

Still another was Meneptha of unbeloved memory because he was the one who cruelly chased the Israelites out of Egypt. It could be he was really suffering from a hummering of a toothache at the time!

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

How can you tell if a pain in the abdomen is serious enough to call a doctor?

Pains in the abdomen can be caused, in the child or adult, by many conditions. Most of them are simple and uncomplicated. Constipation, indigestion or over-indulgence in food or drink may be responsible for abdominal pain. The duration of the pain is probably the best guide to the seriousness of the condition.

When abdominal pain is associated with fever, nausea and vomiting there should be no delay in calling the doctor.

The diagnosis of acute appendicitis, gall-bladder disease and stones in the kidneys demands tremendous training and judgment. The physician is often baffled in his effort to track down the cause of abdominal distress.

A good, safe rule is to describe to your doctor by phone the symptoms and let him, with his excellent discrimination, make the decision as to whether or not you should be examined. Keeping in touch with him every few hours prevents any long lapse of time that only invites complications.

The National Industrial Conference Board's help wanted advertising index, a sensitive measure which dropped in January, has now begun to climb again.

This index measures the volume of classified job advertisements in 52 major newspapers across the country and is considered to accurately measure business conditions.

Comments the board, a non-profit, independent, largely business supported organization: "Gains in the index have usually been followed by dips in the unemployment rate; declines in the index have been followed by increases in unemployment."

This lends weight to the belief that employers, in personnel matters anyway, are looking beyond this slowdown to the eventual upturn.

The fact is that the great majority of analysts today mix their forecasts of a near term slowdown or adjustment with a glowing forecast for the latter part of the year.

There seems to be, in other words, a feeling that the adjustment will simply be the penalty to pay for the next advance.

Some even feel the slowdown is the plateau where forces are regrouped for the next big economic expansion. This applies to both employer and worker.

There is increasing evidence that companies are stockpiling workers for this expansion. Campus recruiters are said to be especially active and competitive for this year's graduating classes.

Harsha Speaks

House Is Urged To Enact Veterans Assistance Act

Congressman William H. Harsha (R), Ohio 6th District, called upon the House of Representatives today to enact the Veterans' Pension and Readjustment Assistance Act of 1967. The bill is before the House today for passage.

Harsha explained this Act was a consolidation of legislation he introduced to increase pensions of veterans and their dependents and legislation requested by President Johnson.

The Ohio lawmaker stated, "The bill provides a cost-of-living increase for all veterans, their widows and children, receiving pension under Public Law 86-211, as amended, and a substantially greater increase for widows and widows with children in the lowest income categories (approximately 8 1/2 per cent). In addition, the bill grants certain wartime benefits not previously provided to veterans serving in the Armed Forces after Aug. 4, 1964, as well as granting additional benefits to those serving after Jan. 31, 1955, and provides increased educational allowances for veterans receiving training under the provision of Public Law 89-358."

It also has modest pension increases for veterans and widows of the Spanish American War and prior wars, together with special provisions for veterans and widows with severe disabilities.

Also, for the first time, widows of veterans will receive an aid and attendance allowance and a veteran reaching the age of 65 years would be presumed permanently and totally disabled and would no longer be required to show 10 per cent disability as required under present law.

Harsha said, "The wartime benefits not previously granted to veterans who served in the armed forces after Aug. 4, 1964, to be provided in this bill are: Disability compensation rates and dependency allowances for service-connected disabled veterans are payable at the wartime rate under all circumstances.

Eligibility is extended for non-service-connected pension for veterans, their widows and children on the same basis as is presently available to veterans of World War I, World War II, and the Korean conflict.

Eligibility for burial allowance is provided, and additional wartime benefits for veterans with service in the armed forces after Jan. 31, 1955, is likewise included," he said.

In addition, the new legislation permits payment of the monthly statutory award for service-connected disabled veterans suffering certain anatomical losses, for each such anatomical loss for those veterans of World War I, World War II, the Korean conflict, or service after Jan. 31, 1955.

The bill also includes provisions to expand the GI Bill of Rights of last year, a measure which Congressman Harsha co-authored, increasing the allowances for fulltime attendance at college under the GI Bill from $100 a month to $130 for those veterans having no dependents, from $125 to $155 for those having one dependent and from $150 to $175 for those having two or more dependents.

Pro rata increases are provided for those attending institutional training on a part time basis.

The bill also would permit full educational benefits to be paid to "educationally disadvantaged" veterans so that they may complete high school without losing eligibility for college training. Time spent in pursuit of a high school course would not be charged against the veteran's basic period of entitlement.

It amends the War Orphans Educational Assistance Act by increasing the period of time during which training may be taken. Present law permits training between ages 18 and 23. This bill would extend the 23-year limit to 26.

The effective date of the legislation would be July 1, 1967. Harsha said, "The members of our armed forces have been compelled to make greater sacrifices than the rest of us and this nation should take appropriate action to meet their special problems."

"The Congress and the nation have from time to time supported measures to help honor our commitments to those veterans who have borne the cost of war in the cause of liberty, yet there are many inequities in the existing law and this legislation is needed to help meet those inequities."

The Ohio lawmaker said, "Also, veterans of the Vietnam conflict should receive benefits comparable to those provided their comrades of previous wars, but because of certain omissions in today's law, these veterans and their dependents are in some cases not eligible for a number of benefits other war veterans receive. It is only fair and just that these loopholes be closed."

He urged the House of Representatives to pass the legislation promptly and expressed the hope that the Senate would act as expeditiously.

Some Observers See Little Value in Arms Control Bid

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the final installment of a three-part series dealing with present and proposed control on firearms. Today's story includes opinions expressed on the judicial and enforcement level.

By MICHAEL GIBSON

In an effort to present all sides of the firearms control controversy, this series has attempted to sample opinions on both the local and higher echelons of government.

Municipal Judge Sterling M. Lamb feels the new effort aimed at firearms control is misguided in its intentions and contains loopholes.

According to Judge Lamb, Section 2923.01 of the proposed law states "no person shall carry or possess a pistol, bowie knife, dirk, blackjack, metal knuckles, sawed-off shotgun, or any other dangerous or deadly weapon concealed on or about his person except as provided by this section."

Judge Lamb's comments for this section was that "it does not affect the right of different types of law officers to carry weapons when on duty. It further prohibits any person over 18 to own or to have in his possession any pistol or other weapon which may be concealed upon his person without a valid license and makes the offense a felony. He adds:

"The proposed section gives all Sheriffs in various counties the power to license individuals if he feels they are of good moral character and no good cause exists to deny such license. Before any license can be issued a check must be made of the files of the Bureau of Investigation for any previous criminal records. This license along with the printed requirements must be carried at all times and shown to any law officer upon demand."

Judge Lamb noted the section does not apply to possession, or use of weapons used in hunting — namely rifles, shotguns, bows and arrows, unless such weapons are carried in a concealed manner.

The provision states that any gun license issued shall be valid for one year and will cost $5 with each annual renewal to cost the same amount. A record must be kept of the sale or transfer of any weapon plus a complete description and serial number.

In the judge's way of thinking, it is difficult to comprehend how such a bill will curtail crime. The judge said there is evidence to support the belief that harsh restrictions have only affected the law-abiding citizen. The professional criminal does not acknowledge social law.

Firearms have been a part of the American way of life. The Constitution guarantees the right to bear arms.

There are millions of firearms in the U. S., and the majority of them are in the hands of law-abiding citizens. "The bill presently under consideration will never deter any criminal from obtaining a gun or using it for his own intentions, whether it be a felony or not," the judge added.

"There are in the United States thousands of gun collectors, gun clubs and hunters who collect, use and maintain firearms of almost every imaginable type and caliber. No exceptions have been made in the House Bill provision for collector of antique firearms."

"There are on the statutes book sufficient and adequate laws regulating the control of firearms in the area of possession. Carrying a concealed weapon in this state has a penalty up to $500 fine, not less than 30 days to six months in the County Jail, or one to three years in the penitentiary," Judge Lamb explained.

He further states that any type of regulation relative to firearms as the present one will only restrict law-abiding citizens in their ability to protect themselves and their property from criminal elements.

It has been found over the past decade that most criminals break into businesses and private homes and steal firearms. Most certainly they will have no intention of obtaining a license.

It seems to be the basic belief of criminals that they will not be apprehended for felonies they commit, including violation of regulations on firearms control.

Opponents of firearms control legislation also tend to rely upon the Second Amendment's guarantee of "the right to bear arms." The Amendment states: "A well regulated militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed upon."

The U. S. Supreme Court and lower federal courts have consistently interpreted this Amendment only as a prohibition against federal interference with state militia and not in their opinion as a guarantee of an individual's right to keep or carry firearms.

In the report handed to the President, the Federal Commission of Law Enforcement and Administrative Justice stated their recommendations for arms control.

"Since laws, as they now stand, apparently do not accomplish the purposes of firearms control, the Commission believes that all States and the Federal Government should act to strengthen them. Any legislative scheme should maximize the possibility of keeping firearms out of the hands of potential criminal elements, while at the same time affording citizens ample opportunity to purchase such weaponry for legitimate purposes.

"It is appropriate to absolutely ban the sale of weapons no citizen has a justifiable reason for owning. States should enact laws prohibiting certain categories of persons, such as, habitual drunkards, drug addicts, mental incompetents, persons with a history of mental disturbance, and persons convicted of certain offenses, from buying, owning, or possessing firearms.

Prevention of crime and apprehension of criminals would be enhanced if each firearm were registered with a governmental jurisdiction. A record of ownership would aid police in tracing and locating those who have committed or who have threatened to commit violent crime. Law enforcement officers should know where each gun is and who owns it.

"Each State should require the registration of all handguns, rifles, and shotguns. If after five years, some States still have not enacted such laws, Congress should pass a Federal firearms regulation act applicable to those States.

"Government regulation to prevent those with criminal background from purchasing firearms cannot be effective as long as mail-order sales and retail sales to persons living outside the seller's state are not controlled. It is essential, also, to reduce and regulate the importation into the U. S. of large numbers of cheap firearms. Since sporting weapons such as rifles and shotguns apparently present less danger of criminal use than do sidearms, control over the latter should be more stringent. A truly effective system of regulation requires a meshing of federal and state action."

The Commission recommends further action: "Each state should require a person to obtain a permit before he can either possess or carry a handgun. Through licensing provisions, federal law should prohibit mail-order and other inter-state sales of handguns and should regulate such sales of rifles and shotguns."

House Is Urged To Enact Veterans Assistance Act

Congressman William H. Harsha (R), Ohio 6th District, called upon the House of Representatives today to enact the Veterans' Pension and Readjustment Assistance Act of 1967. The bill is before the House today for passage.

Harsha explained this Act was a consolidation of legislation he introduced to increase pensions of veterans and their dependents and legislation requested by President Johnson.

The Ohio lawmaker stated, "The bill provides a cost-of-living increase for all veterans, their widows and children, receiving pension under Public Law 86-211, as amended, and a substantially greater increase for widows and widows with children in the lowest income categories (approximately 8 1/2 per cent). In addition, the bill grants certain wartime benefits not previously provided to veterans serving in the Armed Forces after Aug. 4, 1964, as well as granting additional benefits to those serving after Jan. 31, 1955, and provides increased educational allowances for veterans receiving training under the provision of Public Law 89-358."

It also has modest pension increases for veterans and widows of the Spanish American War and prior wars, together with special provisions for veterans and widows with severe disabilities.

Also, for the first time, widows of veterans will receive an aid and attendance allowance and a veteran reaching the age of 65 years would be presumed permanently and totally disabled and would no longer be required to show 10 per cent disability as required under present law.

Harsha said, "The wartime benefits not previously granted to veterans who served in the armed forces after Aug. 4, 1964, to be provided in this bill are: Disability compensation rates and dependency allowances for service-connected disabled veterans are payable at the wartime rate under all circumstances.

Eligibility is extended for non-service-connected pension for veterans, their widows and children on the same basis as is presently available to veterans of World War I, World War II, and the Korean conflict.

Eligibility for burial allowance is provided, and additional wartime benefits for veterans with service in the armed forces after Jan. 31, 1955, is likewise included," he said.

In addition, the new legislation permits payment of the monthly statutory award for service-connected disabled veterans suffering certain anatomical losses, for each such anatomical loss for those veterans of World War I, World War II, the Korean conflict, or service after Jan. 31, 1955.

The bill also includes provisions to expand the GI Bill of Rights of last year, a measure which Congressman Harsha co-authored, increasing the allowances for fulltime attendance at college under the GI Bill from $100 a month to $130 for those veterans having no dependents, from $125 to $155 for those having one dependent and from $150 to $175 for those having two or more dependents.

Pro rata increases are provided for those attending institutional training on a part time basis.

The bill also would permit full educational benefits to be paid to "educationally disadvantaged" veterans so that they may complete high school without losing eligibility for college training. Time spent in pursuit of a high school course would not be charged against the veteran's basic period of entitlement.

It amends the War Orphans Educational Assistance Act by increasing the period of time during which training may be taken. Present law permits training between ages 18 and 23. This bill would extend the 23-year limit to 26.

The effective date of the legislation would be July 1, 1967.

Harsha said, "The members of our armed forces have been compelled to make greater sacrifices than the rest of us and this nation should take appropriate action to meet their special problems."

"The Congress and the nation have from time to time supported measures to help honor our commitments to those veterans who have borne the cost of war in the cause of liberty, yet there are many inequities in the existing law and this legislation is needed to help meet those inequities."

The Ohio lawmaker said, "Also, veterans of the Vietnam conflict should receive benefits comparable to those provided their comrades of previous wars, but because of certain omissions in today's law, these veterans and their dependents are in some cases not eligible for a number of benefits other war veterans receive. It is only fair and just that these loopholes be closed."

Large Group Is on Hand For Inter-Church Meeting

Mr. Ralph Whitaker was guest speaker for the Women's Society of World Service annual Inter - Church meeting in the Christian Service Center of the First Evangelical United Brethren Church. Approximately 120 women were present.

Mrs. Montford Kirkwood Jr., president, welcomed members and guests and introduced Mrs. Clarence Radcliffe, who was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Frank Hawkes presented opening devotions. The group sang a hymn and Mrs. Hawkes read the scripture and led in prayer.

Mrs. Radcliffe explained the meaning of the worship center, asking the question "What is Poverty?" and "What is Affluence?"

Mr. Whitaker, youth counselor for the mobile office of the State Employment Service, presented his subject, "It's What's Happening." He said there is an ever widening gap between those of affluence and those without. We are becoming a computerized society which is one reason for a person to lose his identity. This downgrades people.

Mr. Whitaker stated that more people are going into higher and higher education and yet the rate of high school "drop-outs" is increasing at a great rate. He went on to say that the employment service tries to place a person in a job to which he will be best suited. People are tested to find out their potential abilities.

He said there is a technology revolution going on that will touch generations yet unborn. He counsels with young people on how to face life with the proper self - insight and how to be self sufficient. There is training through the Man Power Development Centers.

Lassie Does Her Bit

NEW YORK (AP) — Litter turns out to be a headache for a raccoon featured on an upcoming episode of the Lassie TV series.

In the show, Lassie takes on the role of anti-litter crusader following the lead of her forest ranger master who has built a Keep America Beautiful display at the entrance to the forest.

While trotting through the forest, Lassie discovers a foraging raccoon with its head stuck in a can carelessly littered by a camper. Lassie rounds up the camper to save the raccoon and further hounds the camper into cleaning up not only his own refuse but a ravine full of litter left by earlier visitors.

As Christians, we should be alert to what's happening in our community. We should be accepting, we should see the potential in those less fortunate and we should contribute to the welfare and well-being of someone else. Real people are needed. Mr. Whitaker closed his part in the program by having Mrs. Thomas Downing read scripture from Deuteronomy and St. Mathew, law and grace.

Interspersed in the program ladies from Presbyterian, First Methodist and Second Baptist churches sang hymns.

For the closing devotional period, Mrs. Radcliffe, assisted by Mr. Carl Wilson held a candlelight service based on "The Lord's Prayer. Miss Melissa Willoughby sang Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer" accompanied by Lucille Kirkwood.

Mrs. H. Eugene Flowers and Mrs. Kirkwood presided at the tea table where the guests were served refreshments. Mrs. Clarence Willoughby and the local Church Responsibility Committee were in charge of this portion.

Book Reviewed At CC League Luncheon Meet

Mrs. William Richards presided during the business meeting when the Child Conservation League met for its Spring Luncheon at Wardell's Party Home.

Mrs. Frank Moore and Mrs. Newell Stevenson Jr. served at the punch table. Mr. Don Humphrey, Mrs. Glenn McCoy, and Mrs. Moore were in charge of the arrangements. Tables were decorated with miniature trees with small birds on them.

Mrs. Edward Grigg introduced Mrs. James M. Stallings who reviewed the book, "The Feminine Mystique," by Betty Friedmann. It was pointed out that the American Woman often thinks she has to live up to the image of a very feminine woman who can only be happy in her home with her children and husband around her.

For some women, the report noted, this can be very boring after the children are all in school and she has more time on her hands. It is very important that she find out who she really is and what she wants to accomplish in future years. Mrs. Stallings said it may mean putting forth extra effort in preparing herself so that she can make a contribution to the world when the opportunity arises.

The report continued that women have a stake in the future and if women enjoy working in civic affairs and government, they should get out of their little box and do so.

Manchester Talks about Controversy

NEW YORK (AP) — Author William Manchester says he refused an invitation by Chief Justice Earl Warren to declare that the findings of the Warren Commission on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy were acceptable to the Kennedys because he felt "it would be improper."

Manchester, writing in the issue of Look magazine which goes on newsstands Tuesday, gives his account of the story behind the controversy surrounding his book, "The Death of a President."

"Unknown to the press," Manchester writes, "the chief justice had given me security clearance and a desk in the commission's VFW Building offices. There, I had immediate access to all testimony, documents, exhibits and depositions."

"Rather cannily, I thought, the chief justice had also invited me to read a first draft of the report and declare, as a friend of the family, that its findings were acceptable to the Kennedys in every respect."

"Although I had cooperated with him in other ways, I demurred, explaining that I felt it would be improper. I was, after all, a private citizen, and my own inquiry had far to go."

"Unlike Mr. Mark Lane, I also declined an invitation to testify, giving the same reason. I refused to rush to judgment in 1964. More to the point, however, I was working a new and entirely different line."

Lane is the author of "Rush to Judgment," a book critical of the Warren Commission report. Manchester has stated that he agrees with the main conclusion of the Warren Commission that Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President Kennedy without accomplices.

Mailmen Map Plans At Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP)—Some 1,000 Cincinnati letter carriers met Sunday to map plans to get higher salaries.

The mailmen are seeking to raise their Civil Service ranking from grade 4 to grade 5, which would mean a yearly increase of around $500. They are now paid $5,300 a year.

Add flaked tuna to the egg-yolk mixture for stuffed hard-cooked eggs and serve on greens as a sturdy luncheon salad.

Large Group Is on Hand For Inter-Church Meeting

Mr. Ralph Whitaker was guest speaker for the Women's Society of World Service annual Inter - Church meeting in the Christian Service Center of the First Evangelical United Brethren Church. Approximately 120 women were present.

Mrs. Montford Kirkwood Jr., president, welcomed members and guests and introduced Mrs. Clarence Radcliffe, who was in charge of the program.

Mrs. Frank Hawkes presented opening devotions. The group sang a hymn and Mrs. Hawkes read the scripture and led in prayer.

Mrs. Radcliffe explained the meaning of the worship center, asking the question "What is Poverty?" and "What is Affluence?"

Mr. Whitaker, youth counselor for the mobile office of the State Employment Service, presented his subject, "It's What's Happening." He said there is an ever widening gap between those of affluence and those without. We are becoming a computerized society which is one reason for a person to lose his identity. This downgrades people.

Mr. Whitaker stated that more people are going into higher and higher education and yet the rate of high school "drop-outs" is increasing at a great rate. He went on to say that the employment service tries to place a person in a job to which he will be best suited. People are tested to find out their potential abilities.

He said there is a technology revolution going on that will touch generations yet unborn. He counsels with young people on how to face life with the proper self - insight and how to be self sufficient. There is training through the Man Power Development Centers.

Dear Abby:

By Abigail Van Buren

Don't Share Your Guilty Knowledge

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "DON'T KNOW," as to whether to tell her fiancé about a previous "indiscretion" was misleading. You said, "If he asks, tell him the truth. Otherwise keep quiet; he may never ask."

May I quote Father John Egan, an eminent premarital counselor, who had this to say on the subject: "Neither partner has the right to burden the other with guilty knowledge. To do so is cowardly, as it attempts to share a burden that belongs to the 'guilty' one alone, and could lead to an unhappy distrust that might spoil the marriage. Better that each should presume, in charity, that each enters marriage with a clean slate."

Call this self-delusion if you will, but I have been assured by other sources that it is more conducive to good mental health than to "tell all."

N M.D. IN SAN RAFAEL
DEAR ABBY: I think I can improve on your answer to the girl who had a boy in her past named Bernie and was marrying a boy named Ernie. If Ernie asks her what went on between her and Bernie she should tell him it's none of his business.

And if he gets tough about it, she should tell him to get lost. Any man who would insist on knowing a lady's past would be a devil to live with.

EXPERIENCED
DEAR ABBY: You should have told DON'T KNOW who was afraid her fiancé would ask some embarrassing questions about her past to answer in this way: "Don't ask me any questions and I won't ask you any, O. K."

BEEN THERE
DEAR ABBY: If you let a person go ahead and think something that isn't true, isn't that the same as lying? I don't agree with you that the girl shouldn't tell her boyfriend everything about her past because he thinks she's a "nice" girl, and she really isn't as nice as he thinks she is.

After all, even if she made only one mistake, she's not pure anymore, and she should have to pay for it.

HIGH MORALS
DEAR ABBY: If you want it straight from the horse's mouth, ("jack-ass" would be more like it), here it is: Don't tell your future husband anything. I made the mistake of answering all his questions and now I am the sorriest woman on earth.

Oh, he did me a favor and married me anyway, but he has never let me forget it for a minute. If I had it to do all over again I wouldn't have been so honest.

TALKED TOO MUCH
DEAR ABBY: Please tell "DON'T KNOW" that you heard from a girl who DOES KNOW, and she wants to give her some good advice. If you HAVE to tell your boyfriend, go ahead and tell him. But don't give him any names.

KNOWS PLENTY
DEAR ABBY: About the Ernie and Bernie question, or "to tell or not to tell." Take it from a man. I pumped the answers from my wife about the other men in her life, and altho we have been married for nearly 20 years, it still bothers me, and I am sorry now that she ever told me.

POMPANO BEACH
DEAR ABBY: I think you erred in telling the bride to confess her one mistake — IF HE ASKS. He may ask, but he really doesn't want to know. A confession would help to ease her guilt, but what a price for HIM to pay!

Men are like children. And you wouldn't give a child that which would hurt him just because he asks for it, would you? I should know! Tell her to lie, and to let him keep his precious illusions. That's HER punishment for her sin, not his!

Blackboard Jungle Is Spreading

NEW YORK (AP) — It was in New York in 1954 that ex-school-teacher Evan Hunter described the city's classrooms—already crowded with the angry children of the poor and increasingly the arena for teen-age savagery—as "the blackboard jungle."

Today the fear is growing that the jungle is spreading, threatening to obliterate the education of many, along with all that education means to their hope of a better future.

This week New York witnessed one of the most disheartening aspects of the battle for young minds when former comrades-in-arms against the jungle instead took aim at each other.

On Tuesday, 79 teachers at Junior High School 98 in the Bronx resigned, accusing the New York City Board of Education of failing to alleviate overcrowding, overwork and student assaults upon teachers.

In an astonishingly rapid and widespread display of sympathy, more than 1,000 teachers from all over the city rallied the next day, echoing the complaints from "98 Bronx," promising protest pickets and urging school boycotts, teachers' union strikes and mass resignations.

School officials expressed dismay, stressed their claims that they have tried to ease the lot of teachers and then announced—as boards of education must—that they would deal firmly with the rebel teachers, that they had "no alternative but to accept" the resignations.

About 60 teachers marched outside Bronx 98 today, defying the back-to-work ultimatum. Only 37 of the school's 126 teachers reported for duty.

In another dispute, some 1,300 students continued to boycott an elementary school in west Harlem. The total enrollment is 1,800, mostly Puerto Rican and Negro. Parents are demanding more say and a voice in selection of a new principal.

School authorities again appealed for new talks, but a spokesman for the parents said he saw no evidence of the school board's "good faith."

An Associated Press survey of school officials, teachers, parents and even students revealed an ironic similarity in the views of all parties to the bitter dispute: There appears to be no single master villain anyone can name, the same complaints about school conditions feed the wrath of all combatants, and everyone agrees on who stands to suffer the worst — the kids.

Says a Puerto Rican mother of a 98 Bronx student: "My girl sure ain't learning a thing when those teachers aren't in school, but sometimes I think she ain't learning much anyway. Not when some of those kids start tearing up the classes."

Ken Allen, a teacher at the nearby Bronx High School of Science, said at Wednesday's massive teacher rally: "We're demanding psychologists and psychiatric help, more supervisors and more civilians in the schools to help with the disruptive students."

Seelig Lester, superintendent of the 12th District, in which 98 Bronx lies, commented: "If I had them, I'd assign them. I just don't have them."

And a 98 Bronx boy: "I'm with the teachers. I think they need more protection. There's this girl in my class that's always yelling dirty words, and it always breaks everything up."

When Hunter wrote the "Blackboard Jungle," it was considered chiefly a Manhattan phenomenon. The most crowded of the city's five boroughs, it had long been the first stop and final home of immigrants, Southern Negroes and Puerto Ricans who have come to make up much of the city's population.

As the population has soared, the city's disadvantaged neighborhoods — with language problems, high joblessness and welfare costs and rising crime rates — have spread, beyond Harlem and Spanish Harlem to Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx.

The Board of Education announced on Monday that for the first time in city history, Negro and Puerto Rican pupils were in the majority in the public schools — 50.2 per cent city-wide, as compared with 31.7 per cent a decade ago.

Dr. Nathan Brown, executive deputy superintendent of schools, said the figures "were no surprise," adding that the increasing ethnic topheaviness "makes it more difficult for us to provide the kind of integrated education that we would like to provide for every section in the city."

While Manhattan, at around 70 per cent, still held the lead in Negro-Puerto Rican school population, the Bronx had 45.6 per cent as of the October 1966 count.

And 98 Bronx itself is 77 per cent Puerto Rican and 19 per cent Negro.

A large, squat concrete structure, 98 Bronx broods like a fortress over row upon row of streets filled with three- and four-story brick tenements. The streets teem with children, even on winter days.

Built to hold 1,598 students, 98 Bronx currently has about 2,000 enrolled and 200 more scheduled for next September, with a teaching staff of 126.

Its principal, Dr. James L. Mandell, says: "This is not a terror or fear school." There have been 13 assaults in this school year, he says, "and all can be characterized as minor, requiring no medical attention."

Then he adds: "Even one is too many, of course, but 13 assaults out of an enrollment of 2,000 doesn't seem excessive in this city."

Mandell says teacher absenteeism has risen rapidly in his school in recent months, to roughly twice the city average, and that this has thrown extra work onto those teachers who do report for work.

Besides assaults, the other major complaint of the resigned teachers was of "coverages" — being required to take on extra classes, at no extra pay, when regular teachers were absent and substitutes were not available.

And the complaints were not confined to 98 Bronx. At Wednesday's protest meeting, led by officials of the United Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, teachers from more than a dozen other schools throughout the city charged officials with bad faith in observing the contract, in not providing substitutes, in imposing coverages on already-burdened teachers, in not adequately punishing assault cases.

Teacher after teacher stressed a common theme: That a disruptive minority robs the cooperative majority of a chance to learn.

Charles Shebar, an English and social studies teacher who said 75 teachers at Junior High School 136 in the Bronx were also ready to resign, drew cheers and prolonged applause when he read from an impassioned statement.

He said: "The most obvious and saddest result of this neglect is the presence of a group of disruptive children for whom there are no services provided. These students assault other children, disrupt classes, destroy school and student property, assault and defy teachers and make it impossible to instruct the vast majority who are ready and anxious to learn. They need help which our very overcrowded, understaffed school can't provide. We cannot continue under these conditions."

A statement by the city superintendent of schools, Bernard E. Donovan, in which he ordered the teachers' return to 98 Bronx, expressed a concern identical to that of the rebels.

Said Donovan: "Our pupils can ill-afford the loss of a single day, especially in a disadvantaged area. Public statements by the United Federation of Teachers describing the school as 'terror-ridden' and as a 'jungle school' reflect adversely and unjustly on the vast majority of our teachers as well as upon trying to teach."

Marx' House Preserved As Monument

LONDON (AP) — London's Karl Marx Memorial Library is to be preserved as a historical monument despite objections from citizens groups.

The run-down, 230-year-old building at Clerkenwell Green has been saved through a preservation order confirmed by the Ministry of Housing and Local Government.

Local groups felt the building was an eyesore that could be torn down and the site turned into a park and playground.

Marx worked in the building that houses many of his original writings. Lenin worked there for a time. The building also has been used as headquarters of radical political groups.

The Greater London Council, which overrode local objections, is to see that the library's trustees renovate the building and make it more attractive.

Dear Abby: Don't Share Your Guilty Knowledge

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "DON'T KNOW," as to whether to tell her fiancé about a previous "indiscretion" was misleading. You said, "If he asks, tell him the truth. Otherwise keep quiet; he may never ask."

May I quote Father John Egan, an eminent premarital counselor, who had this to say on the subject: "Neither partner has the right to burden the other with guilty knowledge. To do so is cowardly, as it attempts to share a burden that belongs to the 'guilty' one alone, and could lead to an unhappy distrust that might spoil the marriage. Better that each should presume, in charity, that each enters marriage with a clean slate."

A QUIRK of lighting in Boston makes Michigan's Gov. George Romney appear to be the outstanding contender for the Republican presidential nomination, you might say if you feel pro-Romney. He was telling representatives of the Harvard Crimson that he thinks LBJ can be defeated in 1968.

The Greater London Council, which overrode local objections, is to see that the library's trustees renovate the building and make it more attractive.

Call this self-delusion if you will, but I have been assured by other sources that it is more conducive to good mental health than to "tell all."

N.M.D. IN SAN RAFAEL

DEAR ABBY: I think I can improve on your answer to the girl who had a boy in her past named Bernie and was marrying a boy named Ernie. If Ernie asks her what went on between her and Bernie she should tell him it's none of his business.

And if he gets tough about it, she should tell him to get lost. Any man who would insist on knowing a lady's past would be a devil to live with.

EXPERIENCED

DEAR ABBY: You should have told DON'T KNOW who was afraid her fiancé would ask her some embarrassing questions about her past to answer in this way: "Don't ask me any questions and I won't ask you any, O.K.?"

BEEEN THERE

DEAR ABBY: If you let a person go ahead and think something that isn't true, isn't that the same as lying? I don't agree with you that the girl shouldn't tell her boyfriend everything about her past because he thinks she's a "nice" girl, and she really isn't as nice as he thinks she is.

After all, even if she made only one mistake, she's not pure anymore, and she should have to pay for it.

HIGH MORALS

DEAR ABBY: If you want it straight from the horse's mouth, ("jack-ass" would be more like it), here it is: Don't tell your future husband anything. I made the mistake of answering all his questions and now I am the sorriest woman on earth.

Oh, he did me a favor and married me anyway, but he has never let me forget it for a minute. If I had it to do all over again I wouldn't have been so honest.

TALKED TOO MUCH

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "DON'T KNOW" that you heard from a girl who DOES KNOW, and she wants to give her some good advice. If you HAVE to tell your boyfriend, go ahead and tell him. But don't give him any names.

KNOWS PLENTY

DEAR ABBY: About the Ernie and Bernie question, or "to tell or not to tell." Take it from a man. I pumped the answers from my wife about the other men in her life, and altho we have been married for nearly 20 years, it still bothers me, and I am sorry now that she ever told me.

POMPANO BEACH

DEAR ABBY: I think you erred in telling the bride to confess her one mistake — IF HE ASKS. He may ask, but he really doesn't want to know. A confession would help to ease her guilt, but what a price for HIM to pay!

Men are like children. And you wouldn't give a child that which would hurt him just because he asks for it, would you? I should know! Tell her to lie, and to let him keep his precious illusions. That's HER punishment for her sin, not his!

Blackboard Jungle Is Spreading

NEW YORK (AP) — It was in New York in 1954 that ex-school-teacher Evan Hunter described the city's classrooms—already crowded with the angry children of the poor and increasingly the arena for teen-age savagery—as "the blackboard jungle."

Today the fear is growing that the jungle is spreading, threatening to obliterate the education of many, along with all that education means to their hope of a better future.

This week New York witnessed one of the most disheartening aspects of the battle for young minds when former comrades-in-arms against the jungle instead took aim at each other.

On Tuesday, 79 teachers at Junior High School 98 in the Bronx resigned, accusing the New York City Board of Education of failing to alleviate overcrowding, overwork and student assaults upon teachers.

In an astonishingly rapid and widespread display of sympathy, more than 1,000 teachers from all over the city rallied the next day, echoing the complaints from "98 Bronx," promising protest pickets and urging school boycotts, teachers' union strikes and mass resignations.

School officials expressed dismay, stressed their claims that they have tried to ease the lot of teachers and then announced—as boards of education must—that they would deal firmly with the rebel teachers, but they had "no alternative but to accept" the resignations.

About 60 teachers marched outside Bronx 98 today, defying the back-to-work ultimatum. Only 37 of the school's 126 teachers reported for duty.

In another dispute, some 1,300 students continued to boycott an elementary school in west Harlem. The total enrollment is 1,800, mostly Puerto Rican and Negro. Parents are demanding more say and a voice in selection of a new principal.

School authorities again appealed for new talks, but a spokesman for the parents said he saw no evidence of the school board's "good faith."

An Associated Press survey of school officials, teachers, parents and even students revealed an ironic similarity in the views of all parties to the bitter dispute: There appears to be no single master villain anyone can name, the same complaints about school conditions feed the wrath of all combatants, and everyone agrees on who stands to suffer the worst—the kids.

Says a Puerto Rican mother of a 98 Bronx student: "My girl sure ain't learning a thing when those teachers aren't in school, but sometimes I think she ain't learning much anyway. Not when some of those kids start tearing up the classes."

Ken Allen, a teacher at the nearby Bronx High School of Science, said at Wednesday's massive teacher rally: "We're demanding psychologists and psychiatric help, more supervisors and more civilians in the schools to help with the disruptive students."

Seelig Lester, superintendent of the 12th District, in which 98 Bronx lies, commented: "If I had them, I'd assign them. I just don't have them."

And a 98 Bronx boy: "I'm with the teachers. I think they need more protection. There's this girl in my class that's always yelling dirty words, and it always breaks everything up."

When Hunter wrote the "Blackboard Jungle," it was considered chiefly a Manhattan phenomenon. The most crowded of the city's five boroughs, it had long been the first stop and final home of immigrants, Southern Negroes and Puerto Ricans who have come to make up much of the city's population.

As the population has soared, the city's disadvantaged neighborhoods—with language problems, high joblessness and welfare costs and rising crime rates—have spread, beyond Harlem and Spanish Harlem to Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx.

The Board of Education announced on Monday that for the first time in city history, Negro and Puerto Rican pupils were in the majority in the public schools—50.2 per cent city-wide, as compared with 31.7 per cent a decade ago.

Dr. Nathan Brown, executive deputy superintendent of schools, said the figures "were no surprise," adding that the increasing ethnic topheaviness "makes it more difficult for us to provide the kind of integrated education that we would like to provide for every section in the city."

While Manhattan, at around 70 per cent, still held the lead in Negro-Puerto Rican school population, the Bronx had 45.6 per cent as of the October 1966 count.

And 98 Bronx itself is 77 per cent Puerto Rican and 19 per cent Negro.

A large, squat concrete structure, 98 Bronx broods like a fortress over row upon row of streets filled with three- and four-story brick tenements. The streets teem with children, even on winter days.

Built to hold 1,598 students, 98 Bronx currently has about 2,000 enrolled and 200 more scheduled for next September, with a teaching staff of 126.

Its principal, Dr. James L. Mandell, says: "This is not a terror or fear school." There have been 13 assaults in this school year, he says, "and all can be characterized as minor, requiring no medical attention."

Then he adds: "Even one is too many, of course, but 13 assaults out of an enrollment of 2,000 doesn't seem excessive in this city."

Squeaks from a bat operating its natural radar system contain frequencies above 50,000 vibrations a second. Many other animals can discern much higher frequencies of sound than does man.

Mandell says teacher absenteeism has risen rapidly in his school in recent months, to roughly twice the city average, and that this has thrown extra work onto those teachers who do report for work.

Besides assaults, the other major complaint of the resigned teachers was of "coverages"—being required to take on extra classes, at no extra pay, when regular teachers were absent and substitutes were not available.

And the complaints were not confined to 98 Bronx. At Wednesday's protest meeting, led by officials of the United Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, teachers from more than a dozen other schools throughout the city charged officials with bad faith in observing the contract, in not providing substitutes, in imposing coverages on already-burdened teachers, in not adequately punishing assault cases.

Teacher after teacher stressed a common theme: That a disruptive minority robs the cooperative majority of a chance to learn.

Charles Shebar, an English and social studies teacher who said 75 teachers at Junior High School 136 in the Bronx were also ready to resign, drew cheers and prolonged applause when he read from an impassioned statement.

Kings-ton News Report

By Miss Margaret Thomas
Phone NI 2-3495

Kings-ton residents were very much interested several days ago when they heard of the opening of the Junction City operation in Vietnam and saw the first jump made in Vietnam in combat territory by the 2nd Battalion of the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Spec-4, John Boggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Boggs, was a participant in this operation, along with 800 U.S. paratroopers dropped near the Viet Cong jungle stronghold near the Cambodian border. They were to find and destroy any Viet Cong trapped inside and search for what was believed to be the headquarters of the entire VC.

The security for the jump was so tight that the troops didn't know about it until the day before. Dropping with them were 60 tons of equipment and 140 tons of supplies.

Spec. Boggs received his training at Fort Ord, Calif., and Ft. Benning, Ga.

Committee members are getting to work early for the Kings-ton Festival which will be held July 27, 28 and 29. They are asking for donations of handmade articles, either food or fancy work, for the "Country Store". Proceeds will go to the Kings-ton Community Park Fund.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sunderland visited Mrs. Sunderland's cousin, Mrs. Edward Weaver, Tuesday afternoon in the hospital at Greenfield. Mrs. Weaver was to be released last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Locke and children of Canton spent the weekend with Mrs. Locke's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rhoades. They all attended the wedding of Mrs. Rhoades' nephew, Ronald Margello, and Miss Sandra Lee Annette, which was held in the Maynard Methodist Church, Columbus.

Also attending the wedding and reception were Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Rhoades of Chillicothe.

Quite a number of local people attended the Fred Waring Concert at Veterans' Memorial in Columbus last Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reisinger, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Dresbach, Mr. and Mrs. David Pontious, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rhoades, and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Dearth.

Mrs. Ira Korst of Harbor Hills went with her sister and brother-in-law, the Raymond Davises, and spent the night, on Wednesday, with them. The concert was put on by the Scottish Rites.

Attending the Legislation Day of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, District 8 at Oak Hill on Tuesday were Mrs. John B. Thomas, Mrs. Howard Fish, Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. William Streber and Mrs. Jake Adams.

Mrs. Fish sang a solo, "The Lord's Prayer", before the noon meal.

Miss Joan Lemley, Mrs. Herbert Lemley, Mrs. Carl Hohenstein and Mrs. W. R. Sunderland were in New Holland on Wednesday evening for inspection of the Eastern Star Chapter.

The Couples Club of the Methodist Church will hold a party today in the Social Room of the Church.

Good Friday services will be held in the Presbyterian Church. This will be a union service.

The Kingston MYF will hold a Sunrise service at the church, followed by a breakfast.

Mrs. Carson Dresbach, who spent six weeks at Winter Garden, Fla., with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Groehne, returned home last week.

The World Today

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peace hopes for Vietnam look as bleak as a flag at half-mast.

Just as President Johnson was flying to Guam for a war conference with his top advisors, the North Vietnamese once more doused peace talk in a cold bath.

In doing so, they gave support to Johnson's critics at home although without the slightest hint they themselves will make one move toward discussion.

Not that Johnson is on a peace mission to Guam. The belief seems general the conference will produce an intensified war.

But at home he has been drenched in suggestions for getting talks started. He has spoken endlessly about this country's willingness to talk, on one condition.

This is it: This country will ease up on the war if the North Vietnamese will only give a sign they are willing to do likewise. They ridiculed this proposal Sunday in a broadcast.

Their foreign ministry rejected any peace talks, military de-escalation, or cease-fire unless the United States abandons what Hanoi calls its "policy of aggression." What does that mean? The broadcast didn't say.

But it did say: "To demand de-escalation and cease-fire at a time when half a million American troops are occupying South Vietnam is to demand that the Vietnamese people surrender to aggression."

The broadcast, describing as

"gangster's logic" the U.S. demand for a reciprocal gesture by North Vietnam before it will stop bombing the North, said this country must stop the bombing "unconditionally."

The North Vietnamese were laying down a condition of their own while giving no assurance they will do differently if the bombing does stop.

In short, they leave themselves free to do as they please. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., recently urged Johnson to stop the bombing unconditionally and wait—he was vague on how long—to see if North Vietnam right then want to reciprocate in order to get peace discussions started.

Johnson's answer to that is this: "The United States has repeatedly declared bombing pauses, one of them 37 days long, and Hanoi did nothing to indicate it wanted to talk."

In the past U. Thant, secretary-general of the United Nations, had proposed a three-step plan toward negotiations: a bombing stop, military de-escalation by both sides, and discussions by all parties, including the Viet Cong.

Last October North Vietnam:

rejected the plan in general although approving the bombing-stop part of it. Now, it is reported, Thant has shifted ground and suggests that the three steps take place simultaneously. The North Vietnamese broadcast would seem to reject that, too, since it wants the bombing stopped "unconditionally."

The North Vietnamese have repeatedly declared there could be no peace without withdrawal of U.S. forces. What's unclear about that is this: Whether the Americans must leave before peace talks can even begin.

If they meant that, it's unrealistic. If there were no U.S. troops in Vietnam, to back up U.S. proposals or demands at the peace table by resuming the war if they weren't met, there would be no peace talks.

North Vietnam would dictate the peace terms in such a situation. But if that isn't what they mean, the North Vietnamese haven't said what they do mean.

In fact, they haven't said or promised anything. They have simply demanded that the United States back down. And this, Johnson has said, the United States will not do. So nothing has moved.

TODAY In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Monday, March 20, the 79th day of 1967. There are 286 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1852, the novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin," by Harriet Beecher Stowe, was published.

On this date:

In 1727, the English mathematician who discovered the law of gravity, Sir Isaac Newton, died.

In 1828, Norwegian dramatist Henrik Ibsen was born.

In 1942, Gen. Douglas MacArthur uttered his now famous sentence: "I shall return."

In 1944, the Nazis took over the government of Hungary.

In 1946, the British government said it would permit women to hold important diplomatic posts.

Ten years ago — President Dwight D. Eisenhower met in Bermuda with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan in an effort to repair damage done to the Anglo-American alliance by differences over Middle East policies.

Five years ago — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev accepted President John F. Kennedy's proposal for talks on international cooperation in the exploration of space.

One year ago — The solid gold World Soccer Cup, the top prize of international soccer competition, was stolen from its display case in London.

Rare Coins Found

JAIPUR, India (AP) — A shepherd boy found an earthen pot containing 50 silver coins which archeologists say may have been issued in the third or fourth century B. C., and which may be the oldest silver coins yet found in India. Jaipur district is in northwestern India, bordering the Great Indian Desert.

Kingson News Report

By Miss Margaret Thomas
Phone NI 2-3495

Kingson residents were very much interested several days ago when they heard of the opening of the Junction City operation in Vietnam and saw the first jump made in Vietnam in combat territory by the 2nd Battalion of the 173rd Airborne Brigade.

Spec-4, John Boggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Boggs, was a participant in this operation, along with 800 U.S. paratroopers dropped near the Viet Cong jungle stronghold near the Cambodian border. They were to find and destroy any Viet Cong trapped inside and search for what was believed to be the headquarters of the entire VC.

The security for the jump was so tight that the troops didn't know about it until the day before. Dropping with them were 60 tons of equipment and 140 tons of supplies.

Spec. Boggs received his training at Fort Ord, Calif., and Ft. Benning, Ga.

Committee members are getting to work early for the Kingson Festival which will be held July 27, 28 and 29. They are asking for donations of handmade articles, either food or fancy work, for the "Country Store". Proceeds will go to the Kingson Community Park Fund.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sunderland visited Mrs. Sunderland's cousin, Mrs. Edward Weaver, Tuesday afternoon in the hospital at Greenfield. Mrs. Weaver was to be released last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Locke and children of Canton spent the weekend with Mrs. Locke's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rhoades. They all attended the wedding of Mrs. Rhoades' nephew, Ronald Margello, and Miss Sandra Lee Annette, which was held in the Maynard Methodist Church, Columbus.

Also attending the wedding and reception were Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Rhoades of Chillicothe.

Quite a number of local people attended the Fred Waring Concert at Veterans' Memorial in Columbus last Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reisinger, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Dresbach, Mr. and Mrs. David Pontious, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rhoades, and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Dearth.

Mrs. Ira Korst of Harbor Hills went with her sister and brother-in-law, the Raymond Davises, and spent the night on Wednesday, with them. The concert was put on by the Scottish Rites.

Attending the Legislation Day of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs, District 8 at Oak Hill on Tuesday were Mrs. John R. Thomas, Mrs. Howard Fish, Mrs. Dwight Davis, Mrs. William Streber and Mrs. Jack Adams.

Mrs. Fish sang a solo, "The Lord's Prayer", before the noon meal.

Miss Joan Lemley, Mrs. Herbert Lemley, Mrs. Carl Hohenstein and Mrs. W. R. Sunderland were in New Holland on Wednesday evening for inspection of the Eastern Star Chapter.

The Couples Club of the Methodist Church will hold a party today in the Social Room of the Church.

Good Friday services will be held in the Presbyterian Church. This will be a union service.

The Kingston MYF will hold a Sunrise service at the church, followed by a breakfast.

Mrs. Carson Dresbach, who spent six weeks at Winter Garden, Fla., with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Groehne, returned home last week.

The World Today

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peace hopes for Vietnam look as bleak as a flag at half-mast.

Just as President Johnson was flying to Guam for a war conference with his top advisers, the North Vietnamese once more doused peace talk in a cold bath.

In doing so, they gave support to Johnson's critics at home although without the slightest hint they themselves will make one move toward discussion.

Not that Johnson is on a peace mission to Guam. The belief seems general the conference will produce an intensified war.

But at home he has been drenched in suggestions for getting talks started. He has spoken endlessly about this country's willingness to talk, on one condition.

This is it: This country will ease up on the war if the North Vietnamese will only give a sign they are willing to do likewise. They ridiculed this proposal Sunday in a broadcast.

Their foreign ministry rejected any peace talks, military de-escalation, or cease-fire unless the United States abandons what Hanoi calls its "policy of aggression." What does that mean? The broadcast didn't say.

But it did say: "To demand de-escalation and cease-fire at a time when half a million American troops are occupying South Vietnam is to demand that the Vietnamese people surrender to aggression."

The broadcast, describing as

"gangster's logic" the U.S. demand for a reciprocal gesture by North Vietnam before it will stop bombing the North, said this country must stop the bombing "unconditionally."

The North Vietnamese were laying down a condition of their own while giving no assurance they will do differently if the bombing does stop.

In short, they leave themselves free to do as they please. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., recently urged Johnson to stop the bombing unconditionally and wait—he was vague on how long—to see if North Vietnam right then want to reciprocate in order to get peace discussions started.

Johnson's answer to that is this: "The United States has repeatedly had bombing pauses, one of them 37 days long, and Hanoi did nothing to indicate it wanted to talk."

In the past U Thant, secretary-general of the United Nations, had proposed a three-step plan toward negotiations: a bombing stop, military de-escalation by both sides, and discussions by all parties, including the Viet Cong.

Last October North Vietnam

rejected the plan in general although approving the bombing-stop part of it. Now, it is reported, Thant has shifted ground and suggests that the three steps take place simultaneously.

The North Vietnamese broadcast would seem to reject that, too, since it wants the bombing stopped "unconditionally."

The North Vietnamese have repeatedly declared there could be no peace without withdrawal of U.S. forces. What's unclear about that is this: Whether the Americans must leave before peace talks can even begin.

If they meant that, it's unrealistic. If there were no U.S. troops in Vietnam, to back up U.S. proposals or demands at the peace table by resuming the war if they weren't met, there would be no peace talks.

North Vietnam would dictate the peace terms in such a situation. But if that isn't what they mean, the North Vietnamese haven't said what they do mean.

In fact, they haven't said or promised anything. They have simply demanded that the United States back down. And this, Johnson has said, the United States will not do. So nothing has moved.

Greenfield, Miami Trace Picked as SCO Contenders

Greenfield McClain, with seven returning lettermen and a veteran pitching corps, has been tabbed by the South Central Ohio League coaches as the team to beat during the 1967 baseball campaign.

It is a familiar spot for Greenfield. Their basketball team was picked as the team to beat last fall, and finished in a tie for second place in the final standings.

The league coaches gave Miami Trace Panthers an excellent chance of winning the league. A poll of the coaches conducted by Washington C.H. sportswriter Don Edwards listed the Black Panthers a close second in the race.

Washington C. H. was picked third, Wilmington, fourth and Circleville and Hillsboro last.

Hillsboro, winner of the league crown last year with an 8-2 record has lost star pitcher, Eddie Robbins as well as a host of other talented players.

Experienced players returning at Greenfield include All-SCO shortstop Sam Daugherty, All-League third baseman, Earl Steward and Jim Kensing, Keith Veach and Steve Sieg.

Miami Trace has senior hurler Rick Hatfield and junior Bob Jones back as well as seven lettermen. The Washington C. H. pitching staff was depleted by graduation, but the squad is expected to be defensively strong and a good hitting team according to first year coach Bill Marton.

Wilmington has 11 lettermen among 46 early candidates. Circleville, winner of only one league game last year, has eight lettermen coming back headed by all-league second sacker Rick Congrove.

Cougars Getting Ready For Bruins in Tourney

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Guy Lewis still thinks UCLA is headed for a fall, but the Houston basketball coach isn't sure his Cougars are mean enough to push the Bruins off their summit perch.

"We lack the killer instinct, and I don't know if that will be fatal against UCLA or not," Lewis said Sunday as the Cougars began preparing for their NCAA tournament date with the unbeaten, top-ranked Bruins Friday night.

The second half of the semifinal doubleheader at Louisville, Ky., pits North Carolina's slick young Tar Heels against surprising Dayton.

Lewis, who predicted UCLA "will get beat" before his club earned the task of confronting the Bruins and 7-foot-1 Lew Alcindor, could promise only one thing Sunday: Houston won't settle for a standoff.

"I haven't decided how we'll play them," he said, "but we definitely won't try any control game on them. We don't even practice a delay. We think we have enough talent to get the ball in the hole against any team."

Elvin (Big E) Hayes heads Houston's talent parade and Lewis hopes the 6-foot-8 pivotman, whose 31 points triggered the Cougars' 83-75 victory over Southern Methodist in last Saturday night's NCAA Midwest regional final, will prove the Big Equalizer against UCLA prodigy Alcindor.

Big Lew poured in 38 points as the Bruins ousted University of Pacific 80-64 in the Far West regional for their 28th straight victory.

"Hayes is even greater this season because he has confidence in his shooting, from anywhere on the court," Lewis said. "He really took charge in the closing minutes against SMU."

The Houston All-America scored 20 points in the second half, most of them from outside, to offset a furious SMU rally that wiped out a 14-point deficit.

The Mustangs tied the score 72-72 with a 15-3 burst, but Hayes' basket with 1:57 remaining sent Houston ahead 76-73 and the nationally seventh-ranked Cougars hung on for their 24th victory in 27 starts.

Fourth-ranked North Carolina, 26-4, gained the semifinals by whipping No. 9 Boston College 96-80 behind Bob Lewis' 31 points in the East regional and unranked Dayton, 24-5, outlasted Virginia Tech in overtime 71-66 for the Mid East crown.

Southern Illinois, the nation's No. 1 college division team, capped an impressive bid for big-time recognition by capturing the National Invitation Tournament title at New York with a 71-56 triumph over Marquette. The victory was the 19th in a row for the Salukis, who topped nine major opponents.

In the NIT consolation game, Rutgers' Bob Lloyd tossed in 44 points for a four-game total of 129, breaking the tournament record of 124 set by Maurice Stokes of St. Francis, Pa., 12 years ago, as the Scarlet Knights raced past Marshall, W.Va., 93-76.

Consolation winners at the four NCAA regional playoffs were Princeton, which downed St. John's, N.Y., 75-58; Indiana, which beat Tennessee 51-44; Kansas, which got past disappointing Louisville 70-68, and Texas Western, which nipped Wyoming 69-67.

6 Basketballs To Be Given at Cage Benefit

The Circleville Youth Baseball board of directors will give away six basketballs at half-time of Tuesday's benefit basketball game.

The game pits the Cleveland Stars (Browns) against the Pickaway Cougars. The latter team is formed from basketball and football coaches at Circleville, Logan Elm, Westfall and Teays Valley school districts.

The ticket drawing for the basketball door prizes will be held at half-time of the feature game.

A preliminary game featuring youths from the Circleville fifth and sixth grade program will begin at 7 p. m. The feature is scheduled to get under way at 8 p. m.

CHS GOLFERS — Snow and inclement weather has confined activities of the Circleville High School golf team to indoor practice sessions. Pete Noble (left) and Billy Adkins, the only two returning lettermen for the Tigers, take their turns swinging in the driving cage which is set up in the Mill St. gymnasium.

Circleville Golf Team Starts Practice Sessions in Gym

The Circleville High School golf team has started practice sessions, confined to the junior high school gymnasium so far, with 14 candidates for the squad.

Heading the list of hopefuls for the Tigers team are Bill Adkins, a sophomore, and Pete Noble, a senior. Both are returning lettermen.

According to Coach Steve Brudzinski, the team should be a young one. Only two seniors are among the candidates. Besides Noble, there is Greg Peck. Included in the seven juniors vying for a spot on the squad are Herb Amey, Bill Brock, Brooks Davis, Steve Nelson and Chuck Plum.

THE SOPHOMORE candidates are Adkins, Mike Ayers, Jim

Ballou, Steve Edstrom, Chris McKenzie, Dan Thompson and Mike Young.

An intra squad match is planned for March 27. Following this match, the starting foursome for the first match will probably be selected, Brudzinski noted.

The first match is a triangular affair scheduled April 1 with Bexley and Westerville providing the competition. The match will begin at 9 a. m. on the Pickaway County Club Course.

A total of 21 matches, including nine-hole events, the South Central Ohio League Championship and District competition 4 - No. 11 title - Dayton Flyers are on the schedule this year.

Looking to the league championship, Brudzinski feels that Washington C. H., with three starters back from last year's foursome, and Wilmington, who will have the home course advantage, should be among the leading contenders for the crown.

Here is the golf schedule for the season:

April 1 Bexley, Westerville, 9 a. m.

April 5 Lancaster Bishop Fenwick, 4 p. m.

April 7 at Lancaster, 4 p. m.

April 8 Waverly, 9 a. m.

April 12 at Miami Trace, 4:15 a. m.

Knicks, Celtics In NBA Playoff

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Knickerbockers may be overmatched when they make their first National Basketball Association playoff appearance in eight years Tuesday night at Boston.

But the Knicks also will be overdue — by two years and four days — against the defending champion Celtics.

Boston rallied behind John Havlicek in the fourth period Sunday and trimmed New York 124-113 in a regular-season finale, extending its winning streak against the Knicks to an NBA-record 19 games.

The Knicks have not beaten the Celtics since March 17, 1965. Sunday's come-from-behind victory enabled the Celts to top the old record of 18 consecutive victories over an NBA rival which they shared with the Minneapolis Lakers.

Cincy Royals End Season With 4 Wins

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Royals finished the regular season with a four-game winning streak and hope the momentum will help in their National Basketball Association semifinal playoffs against the powerful Philadelphia 76ers.

The best-of-five series opens Tuesday night in Philadelphia. The second game will be here Wednesday night.

Cincinnati has had little luck so far against Philadelphia, winning only one of nine season games against Wilt Chamberlain & Co. Philadelphia with the Eastern Division title with an amazing 68-13 record, while the Royals record of 39-42 was good for third place.

For the first time in three years, Coach Jack McMahon reports he has a healthy Oscar Robertson and Jerry Lucas in hopes of stopping the 76ers.

In the last two years, either Robertson or Lucas was injured going into the playoffs, although both played throughout.

Illinois Coaches Resign Positions After Ultimatum

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—Illinois' three scandal-involved coaches reluctantly resigned Sunday, 24 hours after the Big Ten issued an ultimatum that they be fired or the university face indefinite suspension from the conference.

The action by football Coach Pete Elliott, basketball Coach Harry Combes and assistant Howie Braun ended a three-month ordeal stemming from a $21,000 athletic slush fund.

Dr. David D. Henry, university president, who revealed the existence of the fund to the Big Ten and fought to the end to save the jobs of the coaches, accepted the resignations.

On Saturday, Dr. Henry lost his final round in an attempt to show cause why the coaches should not be fired. The faculty representatives told Illinois to fire the coaches by Tuesday or face indefinite suspension from the conference.

Indians Lead In Earned Run Averages

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Joe Adcock's pitching staff is probably leading the league in compiled earned run averages.

"When you get good pitching and score some runs, everything is fine, says the Cleveland Indians' manager. Everything was fine Sunday in an 8-2 victory over the California Angels.

The Tribe's top five hurlers — Steve Hargan, Sam McDowell, Gary Bell, Sonny Siebert and Luis Tiant—have an accumulative earned average of 1.63 for the spring training season. Tiant is too, giving up two runs in 14 innings.

It was Hargan's turn against the Angels Sunday and the 24-year-old right-hander gave up four hits in five scoreless innings. "My fast ball was really moving," he said.

George Culver gave up a pair of runs in the sixth but Steve Bailey shutout the Californians in the last two innings. Meanwhile, the Indians got all the runs they needed in the first two innings.

Fred Whitfield bashed a double for one run, but the Indians had help—like a hit batsman, two walks, two balks, an error, a batted ball, two singles and a sacrifice fly.

Jose Vidal and Chuck Hinton each had a pair of hits and Hargan chipped in with a double.

Mrs. Henry C. Phipps and her son Ogden have nominated 14 colts for Monmouth Park's Sapling to be run next summer.

The second half of the semifinal doubleheader at Louisville, Ky., pits North Carolina's slick young Tar Heels against surprising Dayton.

Lewis, who predicted UCLA "will get beat" before his club earned the task of confronting the Bruins and 7-foot-1 Lew Alcindor, could promise only one thing Sunday: Houston won't settle for a standoff.

"I haven't decided how we'll play them," he said, "but we definitely won't try any control game on them. We don't even practice a delay. We think we have enough talent to get the ball in the hole against any team."

Elvin (Big E) Hayes heads Houston's talent parade and Lewis hopes the 6-foot-8 pivotman, whose 31 points triggered the Cougars' 83-75 victory over Southern Methodist in last Saturday night's NCAA Midwest regional final, will prove the Big Equalizer against UCLA prodigy Alcindor.

Big Lew poured in 38 points as the Bruins ousted University of Pacific 80-64 in the Far West regional for their 28th straight victory.

"Hayes is even greater this season because he has confidence in his shooting, from anywhere on the court," Lewis said. "He really took charge in the closing minutes against SMU."

The Houston All-America scored 20 points in the second half, most of them from outside, to offset a furious SMU rally that wiped out a 14-point deficit.

The Mustangs tied the score 72-72 with a 15-3 burst, but Hayes' basket with 1:57 remaining sent Houston ahead 76-73 and the nationally seventh-ranked Cougars hung on for their 24th victory in 27 starts.

Fourth-ranked North Carolina, 26-4, gained the semifinals by whipping No. 9 Boston College 96-80 behind Bob Lewis' 31 points in the East regional and unranked Dayton, 24-5, outlasted Virginia Tech in overtime 71-66 for the Mid East crown.

Southern Illinois, the nation's No. 1 college division team, capped an impressive bid for big-time recognition by capturing the National Invitation Tournament title at New York with a 71-56 triumph over Marquette. The victory was the 19th in a row for the Salukis, who topped nine major opponents.

In the NIT consolation game, Rutgers' Bob Lloyd tossed in 44 points for a four-game total of 129, breaking the tournament record of 124 set by Maurice Stokes of St. Francis, Pa., 12 years ago, as the Scarlet Knights raced past Marshall, W.Va., 93-76.

Consolation winners at the four NCAA regional playoffs were Princeton, which downed St. John's, N.Y., 78-58; Indiana, which beat Tennessee 51-44; Kansas, which got past disappointing Louisville 70-68, and Texas Western, which nipped Wyoming 69-67.

6 Basketballs To Be Given at Cage Benefit

The Circleville Youth Baseball board of directors will give away six basketballs at half-time of Tuesday's benefit basketball game.

The game pits the Cleveland Stars (Browns) against the Pickaway Cougars. The latter team is formed from basketball and football coaches at Circleville, Logan Elm, Westfall and Teays Valley school districts.

The ticket drawing for the basketball door prizes will be held at half-time of the feature game.

A preliminary game featuring youths from the Circleville fifth and sixth grade program will begin at 7 p. m. The feature is scheduled to get under way at 8 p. m.

CHS GOLFERS — Snow and inclement weather has confined activities of the Circleville High School golf team to indoor practice sessions. Pete Noble (left) and Billy Adkins, the only two returning lettermen for the Tigers, take their turns swinging in the driving cage which is set up in the Mill St. gymnasium.

Circleville Golf Team Starts Practice Sessions in Gym

The Circleville High School golf team has started practice sessions, confined to the junior high school gymnasium so far, with 14 candidates for the squad.

Heading the list of hopefuls for the Tigers team are Bill Adkins, a sophomore, and Pete Noble, a senior. Both are returning lettermen.

According to Coach Steve Brudzinski, the team should be a young one. Only two seniors are among the candidates. Besides Noble, there is Greg Beck. Included in the seven juniors vying for a spot on the squad are Herb Amey, Bill Brock, Brooks Davis, Steve Nelson and Chuck Plum.

THE SOPHOMORE candidates are Adkins, Mike Ayers, Jim

Ballou, Steve Edstrom, Chris McKenzie, Dan Thompson and Mike Young.

An intra squad match is planned for March 27. Following this match, the starting foursome for the first match will probably be selected, Brudzinski noted.

The first match is a triangular affair scheduled April 1 with Bexley and Westerville providing the competition. The match will begin at 9 a. m. on the Pickaway County Club Course.

A total of 21 matches, including nine-hole events, the South Central Ohio League Championship and District competition 4 - No. 11 italic - Dayton Flyers are on the schedule this year.

Looking to the league championship, Brudzinski feels that Washington C. H., with three starters back from last year's

Dayton Flyers Challenge N. Carolina This Weekend

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—Dayton's Flyers, who take cliffhangers in stride, will challenge fourth-ranked North Carolina in the NCAA Basketball Tournament semifinals at Louisville this weekend.

Eighth-ranked Tennessee had given Dayton a hard time Friday night. But another long shot, Virginia Tech, offered unranked Dayton even more trouble before the Flyers finally captured the Midwest Regional title at Northwestern University's McGraw Hall Saturday night.

Dayton, making its third straight NCAA try and fourth since 1952, rallied to whip Virginia Tech 71-66 in overtime after beating Tennessee 53-52 Friday night.

The Flyers, now boasting a 24-5 overall record, face North Carolina (27-4) fire-tested by three straight NCAA thrillers.

Coach Don Donaher, whose best previous NCAA showing was third in the 1965 Midwest Regional, said he doesn't know much about North Carolina, but he does know his own Flyers have given him fits this season.

"We spurt," said Donaher, who is in his fourth Flyer Season. "It started last Oct. 15. I thought I'd be dead before the season was over. We'd get in front of the other team by 20 points and fall behind."

Dayton's sparkplug is 6-foot-4 Don May, leading scorer and an exceptional rebounder, who was named the outstanding player of the Meast Regional He shaded Virginia Tech's Glen Combs—who had a two-game total of 45 points against May's 37-by one vote.

Knicks, Celtics In NBA Playoff

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New York Knickerbockers may be overmatched when they make their first National Basketball Association playoff appearance in eight years Tuesday night at Boston.

But the Knicks also will be overdue — by two years and four days — against the defending champion Celtics.

Boston rallied behind John Havlicek in the fourth period Sunday and trimmed New York 124-113 in a regular-season finale, extending its winning streak against the Knicks to an NBA-record 19 games.

The Knicks have not beaten the Celtics since March 17, 1965. Sunday's come-from-behind victory enabled the Celts to top the old record of 18 consecutive victories over an NBA rival which they shared with the Minneapolis Lakers.

In other Sunday windups on the regular schedule, Philadelphia's Eastern Division champions beat Baltimore 132-129, San Francisco's Western kings downed Detroit 135-127 and Chicago's precocious Bulls drubbed Los Angeles 122-109.

New York, which earned a playoff berth for the first time since 1959 by finishing fourth in the East, led the Celtics 95-91 after three periods.

But Havlicek scored 10 of his 22 points — including a 20-foot jump shot that sent the Celts in front 98-97 — in the last 12 minutes as the nine-time playoff champions drew off to their 60th victory in 81 starts.

Sam Jones topped the Celtics with 29 points while Walt Bellamy and Howard Komoves each scored 22 for New York.

Wilt Chamberlain's 26-point second half led Philadelphia past the Bullets and gave the 76ers a 68-13 finish, the best in NBA history.

Chamberlain scored 37 points in all before leaving the game with five minutes remaining and Philadelphia in front 126-99. Baltimore outscored the 76ers 30-6 thereafter as Gus Johnson hit eight of his 28 points.

San Francisco's Rick Barry poured in 39 points for a season total of 2,775 and the league scoring title in the Warriors' victory over Detroit. With the score tied 120-120, Fred Hetzel scored two baskets, Nate Thurmond followed with a three-point play and the Warriors breezed home.

Bob Boozer scored 24 points and McCoy McLemore hit for 12 in the final quarter as the Bulls wound up their initial NBA season with a 33-48 mark. They are the first expansion team in sports history to make it to post-season playoffs the first time around.

The Knicks meet the Celtics and the 76ers take on Cincinnati in Tuesday night's Eastern Division semifinal playoff openers. San Francisco plays Los Angeles and St. Louis goes against Chicago the same night in the Western Division semis. All four series are best-of-5 sets.

Cincy Royals End Season With 4 Wins

CINCINNATI (AP)—The Cincinnati Royals finished the regular season with a four-game winning streak and hope the momentum will help in their National Basketball Association semifinal playoffs against the powerful Philadelphia 76ers.

The best-of-five series opens Tuesday night in Philadelphia. The second game will be here Wednesday night.

Cincinnati has had little luck so far against Philadelphia, winning only one of nine season games against Wilt Chamberlain & Co. Philadelphia with the Eastern Division title with an amazing 68-13 record, while the Royals record of 39-42 was good for third place.

For the first time in three years, Coach Jack McMahon reports he has a healthy Oscar Robertson and Jerry Lucas in hopes of stopping the 76ers.

In the last two years, either Robertson or Lucas was injured going into the playoffs, although both played throughout.

Illinois Coaches Resign Positions After Ultimatum

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—Illinois' three scandal-involved coaches reluctantly resigned Sunday, 24 hours after the Big Ten issued an ultimatum that they be fired or the university face indefinite suspension from the conference.

The action by football Coach Pete Elliott, basketball Coach Harry Combes and assistant Howie Braun ended a three-month ordeal stemming from a $21,000 athletic slush fund.

Dr. David D. Henry, university president, who revealed the existence of the fund to the Big Ten and fought to the end to save the jobs of the coaches, accepted the resignations.

On Saturday, Dr. Henry lost his final round in an attempt to show cause why the coaches should not be fired. The faculty representatives told Illinois to fire the coaches by Tuesday or face indefinite suspension from the conference.

Indians Lead In Earned Run Averages

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Joe Adcock's pitching staff is probably leading the league in compiled earned run averages.

"When you get good pitching and score some runs, everything is fine, says the Cleveland Indians' manager. Everything was fine Sunday in an 8-2 victory over the California Angels.

The Tribe's top five hurlers — Steve Hargan, Sam McDowell, Gary Bell, Sonny Siebert and Luis Tiant—have an accumulated average of 1.63 for the spring training season. Tiant is too, giving up two runs in 14 innings.

It was Hargan's turn against the Angels Sunday and the 24-year-old right-hander gave up four hits in five scoreless innings. "My fast ball was really moving," he said.

George Culver gave up a pair of runs in the sixth but Steve Bailey shutout the Californians in the last two innings. Meanwhile, the Indians got all the runs they needed in the first two innings.

Fred Whitfield bashed a double for one run, but the Indians had help—like a hit batsman, two walks, two balks, an error, a batted ball, two singles and a sacrifice fly.

Jose Vidal and Chuck Hinton each had a pair of hits and Hargan chipped in with a double.

Mrs. Henry C. Phipps and her son Orden have nominated 14 colts for Monmouth Park's Sapling to be run next summer.

Atlanta Braves Manager Has Confidence in Team

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Sports Editor

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—
The "nuts and bolts" man, pipe-smoking, tobacco-chewing Billy Hitchcock of the Atlanta Braves, doesn't pull punches when he tells you he has a "good ball club" this year, for Billy shoots right from the shoulder.

The hardware merchant of Opelika, Ala., who has had a glamor career in athletics, in the Air Force and as a major league player, manager, scout and coach, points out the "improvements we made" and the "fine attitude of these players" following their fine finish last year.

"We got hot the last two months of 1966," Billy says,
"and I'm sure our players got the idea they could win the pennant this year. I'm not saying we are going to win it but they feel they can do it."

NEW YORK (AP) — Television, often a bit drab and predictable, proves it can be a pretty exciting medium, too.

In a three-day period it carried two of its greatest actresses working in graceful complement to each other as well as one of Broadway's classic musical comedies with the queen of the musical stage in her original role.

The NBC treats started with Friday night's "Anastasia" with Julie Harris and Lynn Fontanne. The 90 minute drama, adapted for television, suffered considerable in passage. The viewer was never given enough time to become really acquainted with either the troubled girl who agreed to pose as the Russian czar's daughter—Miss Harris—or the dowager empress portrayed so movingly by Miss Fontanne.

But the structure—even the workings of the plot to steal the imperial fortune if the old empress could be persuaded to accept the girl as a long lost granddaughter—was almost unimportant. The performances of the two fine actresses was the important thing.

By coincidence, Friday night on NBC was a sort of Julie Harris festival. Shortly before "Anastasia," she appeared as guest star in "Tarzan" of all things. Miss Harris playing a missionary captured by savages, gave the role the same concentration and artistry that she used on the more serious effort.

"Annie Get Your Gun" also was reduced to a miniversion so it could be squeezed into 90 minutes including commercials. But it was handsome, gay and as buoyant as all those great tunes—Irving Berlin wrote more than 20 years ago. Ethel Merman perfectly at home in the role she created, and handsome Bruce Yarnell and his fine voice backing her up, it was a fine, amusing change of pace.

NBC also tossed in a documentary for good measure—"Whose Right to Bears Arms." Sunday night. It revealed nothing new in the current controversy over the restricted sale of arms. But it did make dramatic points with statistics.

The program raised the question about stronger gun legislation, and spent considerable time on activities of the National Rifle Association which opposed strict federal regulation of firearms purchase. It offered no solution to the problem.

Recommended tonight: Perry Como Show, NBC, 9-10 EST, Easter program with Woody Allen and Connie Stevens as guest stars.

Linden, Strasburg Win HS State Championships

By HAL PARIS
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — No one who saw Columbus Linden McKinley trounce Cleveland East Tech Saturday night could dispute Coach Vince Chickerella's appraisal of his own team.

"I think we reached our peak... we had a terrific team performance."

The aggressive, quick-handed Panthers certainly were terrific as they humiliated two-time king East Tech 88-56 for the Class AA high school basketball championship.

Cleveland, tabbed as a speedy run-and-shoot club, almost was run out of St. John Arena by the swift Panthers, who turned on some jet power of their own.

"I told my assistant to pinch me to see if I was awake or still dreaming," Chickerella said. There was no way I ever expected anything like that."

Nor did anyone else in the crowd of 13,686 who watched in disbelief as Linden shattered Tech's dream of a third state championship.

By the end of the first quarter, the pressing, hustling Panthers had the championship all but tucked away, turning the Scarabs into a fumbling, jittery quintet.

Ahead only 22-14 late in the first quarter, Linden ripped off 14 straight points and outscored its taller foe 19-2 over a span of 6½ minutes. That made it 41-16 and Tech was finished.

"We played like a true champion and I think we really are one," Chickerella exclaimed happily.

The nighttime action came fast and furious after Strasburg ended a perfect 27-0 campaign by outlasting Arcanum 54-47 for the Class A title.

East Tech Coach John Chavers, commenting on the beating his Scarabs took, said "Anytime a team gets off to a bad start like we did, it's hard to come back."

On Friday night, after Tech nipped Cincinnati LaSalle 63-62, Chavers commented that to win in the state tournament, a team could not commit more than 10 errors.

The Scarabs, dogged all night by a bounding Linden defense, were guilty of 24 errors, partially explaining their collapse.

Jim Clark's 19 points led the victors but teammates Jim Clemons and All - Ohio Ed Young chipped in 18 apiece and Rodney Kent added 10.

Myron Rogers and Bill Lucas, who had supplied most of Tech's scoring punch all season, and who delivered 45 against LaSalle, were limited to a total of 19. Reserve Leon Harris topped the Scarabs with 14, all in the second half.

It marked the fifth straight year that a Columbus or Dayton team had topped the annual cage classic. Columbus East won in 1963, Dayton Belmont in '64, Columbus South in '65 and Dayton Chaminade a year ago.

Tech was trying to end a drought that has not seen a northern team prevail since 1958 and 1959, the years that the Scarabs put together back-to-back titles.

The victory margin was the second widest in tournament history. Middletown bombed Newark by 38 points, 73-35, in 1953.

It was Linden's first state championship.

Strasburg, nailing down the first title for a Tuscarawas County school, used proficiency at the foul line to emerge the victor.

Coach Charles Huggins' all-winning quintet converted 16 of 19 foul shots while Arcanum, trying to repeat the championship it won in 1956, could hit only 11 of 23.

Still, the outcome was in doubt until the last 30 seconds as the gallant Darke County school was within four points in the dying moments.

"I'm kind of glad it's all over," said Huggins, after he took the traditional trip to the showers. "It's a long road."

Arcanum Coach Richard Graeff, a native of Dover, which is only six miles from Strasburg, said, "I guess we've got to feel a little sorry for ourselves. But it doesn't hurt so much when you lose to a good team."

Huggins singled out All-Ohio John Studer, Strasburg's bread and butter player.

"This kid is simply great. He can beat you in so many ways," Huggins said.

Studer, handicapped by early foul trouble, scored only 13, considerably less than his 27.1 average. But he pulled down 19 big rebounds, more than twice as many as anyone else.

Myron Rogers and Bill Lucas, who had supplied most of Tech's scoring punch all season, and who delivered 45 against LaSalle, were limited to a total of 19. Reserve Leon Harris topped the Scarabs with 14, all in the second half.

It marked the fifth straight year that a Columbus or Dayton team had copped the annual cage classic. Columbus East won in 1963, Dayton Belmont in '64, Columbus South in '65 and Dayton Chaminade a year ago.

Tech was trying to end a drought that has not seen a northern team prevail since 1958 and 1959, the years that the Scarabs put together back-to-back titles.

The victory margin was the second widest in tournament history. Middletown bombed Newark by 38 points, 73-35, in 1953.

It was Linden's first state championship.

Strasburg, nailing down the first title for a Tuscarawas County school, used proficiency at the foul line to emerge the victor.

Coach Charles Huggins' all-winning quintet converted 16 of 19 foul shots while Arcanum, trying to repeat the championship it won in 1956, could hit only 11 of 23.

Still, the outcome was in doubt until the last 30 seconds as the gallant Darke County school was within four points in the dying moments.

"I'm kind of glad it's all over," said Huggins, after he took the traditional trip to the showers. "It's a long road."

Arcanum Coach Richard Graeff, a native of Dover, which is only six miles from Strasburg, said, "I guess we've got to feel a little sorry for ourselves. But it doesn't hurt so much when you lose to a good team."

Huggins singled out All-Ohio John Studer, Strasburg's bread and butter player.

"This kid is simply great. He can beat you in so many ways," Huggins said.

Studer, handicapped by early foul trouble, scored only 13, considerably less than his 27.1 average. But he pulled down 19 big rebounds, more than twice as many as anyone else.

2 Top Opponents Say Escalation Will Come Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top Democrats who oppose escalation of the Vietnam war say they believe increased U.S. military pressure will follow President Johnson's current strategy meeting on Guam.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Sunday he believes a decision may be made to deploy substantial numbers of American troops in the Mekong Delta area controlled by the Viet Cong. "We cannot foreclose the possibility of an escalation of the war," he said.

And Sen. J.W. Fulbright of Arkansas, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said, "I think they will increase the manpower over there substantially in the near future, probably following this conference."

But Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey contended the focus of the Guam conference is on post-war planning.

In other comment on the war: Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., says he found "something of some importance" concerning Vietnam which he wants to relate to the State Department. He would not elaborate except to say his information did not involve a peace fellow from North Vietnam. He returned Saturday night from a 15-day trip to South Vietnam and other Asian areas.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., suggested "de-Americanizing the military action by gradually substituting South Vietnamese for U.S. troops." He said if Republicans can provide a policy "that will extricate the United States from this quagmire, I think we will not only win an election but the approval of the world."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said differences between Johnson and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., could produce a stalemate where the President would refuse to take any particular action which Kennedy suggested.

Kennedy wrote Time magazine that its report of a cussing confrontation between Johnson and Kennedy on war policy was "highly inaccurate." They clashed in a meeting, Kennedy said was "not without friction" after a Kennedy trip to Europe.

The National Committee for an Effective Congress said failure to settle the war could bring a fragmentation of Congress, especially the Democratic party and "open the way for adventurers of the left and right."

Supreme Court Ruling Makes Conviction Hard

NEW YORK (AP) — Some admitted killers and rapists walk the nation's streets today because of a Supreme Court decision sharply limiting the use of confessions in trials.

Police and prosecutors say they are handcuffed.

State legislators talk of new laws to redress the balance of justice, but concede that such statutes might be declared by the highest court to be unconstitutional.

A presidential crime commission studied the problem and seven of its 19 members said the situation calls for amendment of the Constitution. A Senate Judiciary subcommittee studying the implications of the court's 5 to 4 decision last June 13 has received similar suggestions. But some lawyer witnesses opposed a constitutional amendment, saying a future court might soften the ruling.

Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark told a House Judiciary subcommittee he was against any such attempt to override the court.

"I doubt that anything approaching a case has been made for that at this time," said Clark.

Rep. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, introduced in the House a bill authorizing the appointment of "masters of examination" to supervise interrogation of suspects by federal law enforcement agencies. He said it could serve as a model for state legislatures to consider in revising criminal codes.

"We must not be faced with the spectacle of the acknowledged criminal freed merely because a policeman is unable to guess how five judges of the supreme court will vote on a particular issue," said Taft.

Concern over the situation came to a focus on Feb. 20 when Jose Suarez, 22, a New York factory worker, was set free despite his confession that he slew his wife and five children. Across the country, there have been many similar cases involving murder, robbery, rape or kidnapping.

The Supreme Court decision came on an appeal by Ernest A. Miranda, 26. He was convicted of kidnapping an 18-year-old girl from a street in Phoenix, Ariz., driving her into the desert and raping her.

In ordering a new trial, the majority opinion written by Chief Justice Earl Warren said Miranda's constitutional rights had been violated and laid down this set of guidelines:

"The prosecution may not use statements, whether exculpatory or inculpatory, stemming from custodial interrogation of the defendants unless it demonstrates the use of procedural safeguards effective to secure the privilege against self-incrimination."

"Prior to any questioning, the person must be warned that he has a right to remain silent, that any statement he does make may be used as evidence against him, and that he has a right to the presence of an attorney, either retained or appointed."

Justice Michael Kern of the New York State Supreme Court decreed that by these rules Suarez must go free. His confession was the only evidence against him.

Said Justice Kern: "Even an animal such as this one, and I believe this is insulting to the animal kingdom, must be protected with all the legal safeguards.

"It makes one's blood run cold and any decent human being's stomach turn to let a thing like this out on the street."

Suarez was the fourth man freed in New York murder cases since the beginning of 1967 on the ground that they had not been advised of their right to counsel before they confessed.

Similar cases have been reported across the country.

On March 16, 1966, Paul Wightman, 71, a clerk at a hotel on the edge of Seattle's skid row, was shot and killed in a $30-robbery. Four days later Harry Laverne Van Devanter, 21, was arrested.

Police said he made a voluntary statement admitting the shooting and told them where to find the pistol. On June 30, citing the Miranda guidelines, a judge suppressed the alleged statement and dismissed the case.

Dist. Atty. Arien Specter of Philadelphia predicted that two dozen confessed slayers would escape punishment in that city this year because of the Miranda ruling.

Said Specter: "I think we ought to stop complaining about it and do our best within the limits of the Miranda rule until we have a chance to relitigate it by taking another case up to the Supreme Court on the same subject."

Charles E. Moylan Jr., state's attorney for Baltimore, said he saw no chance that state legislation would be effective "since no single act of a single legislature could affect the U.S. Supreme Court."

Moylan noted that a bill proposed by Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee, to admit voluntary confessions as evidence would apply only to federal courts.

"If the McClellan law passes, however," Moylan said, "this would have some persuasive weight in terms of the Supreme Court's attitude."

"It might even be a precedent to press for a constitutional amendment to permit us to do nationwide what McClellan would do for the federal courts alone."

The New York State Legislature is looking to a legal commission to suggest changes in the criminal code. The commission will report next year.

Commission Chairman Richard J. Bartlett of Glens Falls said "rulings on the admissibility of confessions are so recent and so unsettled that for anyone to suggest statutory or constitutional change is premature."

A similar view was taken by Paul Douglas, county attorney in Lincoln, Neb. He told a hearing of McClellan's subcommittee the Miranda decision contains too many unanswered questions to justify talking of a constitutional amendment now.

The seven members of the President's crime commission who thought a constitutional amendment was the answer had this to say: "We are passing through a phase in our history of understandable, yet unprecedented, concern with the rights of accused persons. This has been welcomed as long overdue in many areas."

"But the time has come for a like concern for the rights of citizens to be free from criminal molestation of their persons and property."

"In many respects the victims of crime have been the forgotten men of our society — inadequately protected, generally uncompensated, and the object of relatively little attention by the public at large."

The constitutional amendment proposed by the seven commissioners would grant the police more time and opportunity to question suspects than they have under the Miranda guidelines and relax the limitations on voluntary confessions.

Two bills have been introduced in the Washington State Legislature to set up a public defender system for suspects who cannot afford lawyers. A number of states have similar systems.

Republican Donald L. Grunsky, chairman of the California State Senate Judiciary Committee, commented: "Since we must work within the Supreme Court decision we feel we should be concerned with upgrading police officer training and quality to a point where they are better qualified to cope with the handicaps of the guidelines."

Sheriff Wilson Purdy of Dade County, Fla., said, "We can learn to live with the Supreme Court's decision. I would be remiss if I didn't also say that we must have better-educated police officers."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration wishes America's trusting merchants would stop accepting Social Security cards as identification for check cashing purposes.

That little card, Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball said today, is not a guarantee of its bearer's identity. Millions of dollars worth of bad checks are cashed each year by persons presenting bogus Social Security cards, he said.

Among the institutions refusing to accept them as positive identification, Ball said, is the Social Security Administration. When a person makes a claim for Social Security benefits, he said, some other verifiable form of identification is demanded.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every war brings up the problem of protecting the foot soldier's feet — the wetter the war the bigger the problem.

For Vietnam, where a very wet war is in progress, the Pentagon is testing a technique of having the men dip their bare feet in a silicon solution. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara says.

McNamara described the method to senators while testifying recently on a defense appropriations bill. A partial transcript was released over the weekend.

"We have, in effect, what amounts to something akin to frostbite in a tropical area, because men's feet are immersed in water for 24 hours at a time and the skin actually begins to peel off," he said.

Ohio Welfare Department Pays Its Medical Bills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Welfare Department has cleaned up the better part of a million-dollar backlog in doctor's bills, owed to medical men who treat welfare clients under medicare.

John W. Main, the department's business chief, reported last December he was swamped with between $1.2 and $1.3 million in back claims, or more than 40,000 individual doctor bills.

At the time, some physicians complained the state owed them $3,000 to $4,000, and an optometrist recently said he was still owed $1,000.

Main says he "just can't tell" how much money is still owed to Ohio doctors who have treated welfare patients under medicare.

However, the Nationwide Insurance Co., which acts as the federal government's intermediary in paying medicare claims, has already received more than 28,000 of the back claims from the Welfare Department.

Each claim form carries at least one doctor bill, so that well over half the old bills have been received by Nationwide.

The insurance company has set up a 22-man staff to give "priority service" to the back claims.

Doctors generally are cooperating with medicare requirements. Nationwide spokesmen say, although at the outset some balked at signing certain federal forms.

When welfare clients are treated under medicare, federal law requires that the physician send their bills to the state or medicare forms.

The state pays the first $50 deductible amount and submits the bill to Nationwide, which administers the federal funds for that portion of medicare.

Main said the only difficulty encountered with optometrists was that some had signed themselves as "doctors," and found their bills being confused with those of physicians.

A standard billing form was mailed last week to optometrists throughout the state, Main said, and it should result in speedier payment.

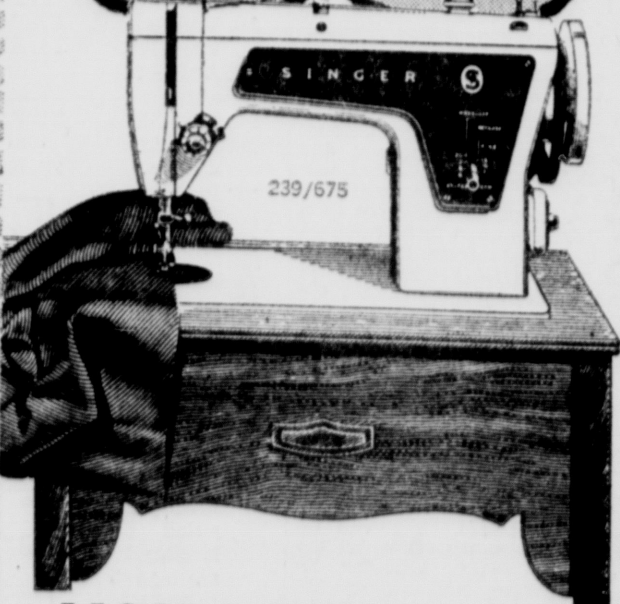

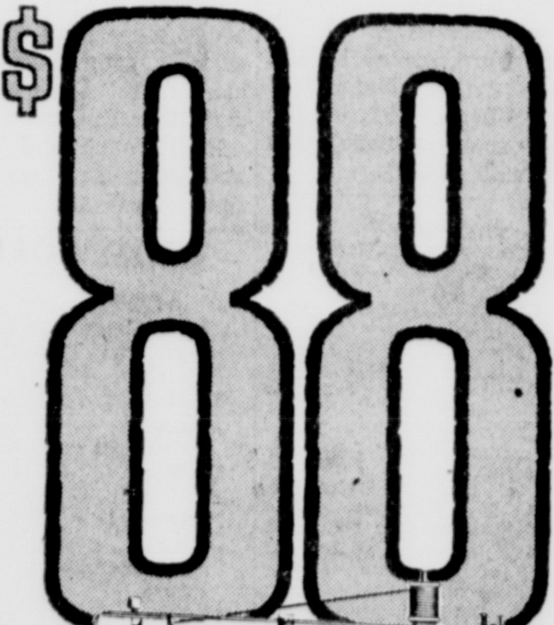

He said his office paid medicare bills in February totaling $95,000 for 2,758 clients.

The Welfare Department will pay out $8 million in the first quarter of 1967 for all types of health care for its clients, up from $7.6 million in the last quarter of 1966.

2 Top Opponents Say Escalation Will Come Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top Democrats who oppose escalation of the Vietnam war say they believe increased U.S. military pressure will follow President Johnson's current strategy meeting on Guam.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Sunday he believes a decision may be made to deploy substantial numbers of American troops in the Mekong Delta area controlled by the Viet Cong. "We cannot foreclose the possibility of an escalation of the war," he said.

And Sen. J.W. Fulbright of Arkansas, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said, "I think they will increase the manpower over there substantially in the near future, probably following this conference."

But Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey contended the focus of the Guam conference is on post-war planning.

In other comment on the war: Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., says he found "something of some importance" concerning Vietnam which he wants to relate to the State Department. He would not elaborate except to say his information did not involve a peace feller from North Vietnam. He returned Saturday night from a 15-day trip to South Vietnam and other Asian areas.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., suggested "de-Americanizing the military action by gradually substituting South Vietnamese for U.S. troops." He said if Republicans can provide a policy "that will extricate the United States from this quagmire, I think we will not only win an election but the approval of the world."

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said differences between Johnson and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., could produce a stalemate where the President would refuse to take any particular action which Kennedy suggested.

Kennedy wrote Time magazine that its report of a cussing confrontation between Johnson and Kennedy on war policy was "highly inaccurate." They clashed in a meeting, Kennedy said was "not without friction" after a Kennedy trip to Europe.

The National Committee for an Effective Congress said failure to settle the war could bring a fragmentation of Congress, especially the Democratic party and "open the way for adventurers of the left and right."

Ohio Welfare Department Pays Its Medical Bills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio Welfare Department has cleaned up the better part of a million-dollar backlog in doctor's bills, owed to medical men who treat welfare clients under medicare.

John W. Main, the department's business chief, reported last December he was swamped with between $1.2 and $1.3 million in back claims, or more than 40,000 individual doctor bills.

At the time, some physicians complained the state owed them $3,000 to $4,000, and an optometrist recently said he was still owed $1,000.

Main says he "just can't tell" how much money is still owed to Ohio doctors who have treated welfare patients under medicare.

However, the Nationwide Insurance Co., which acts as the federal government's intermediary in paying medicare claims, has already received more than 28,000 of the back claims from the Welfare Department.

Each claim form carries at least one doctor bill, so that well over half the old bills have been received by Nationwide.

The insurance company has set up a 22-man staff to give "priority service" to the back claims.

Doctors generally are cooperating with medicare requirements. Nationwide spokesmen say, although at the outset some balked at signing certain federal forms.

When welfare clients are treated under medicare, federal law requires that the physician send their bills to the state or medicare forms.

The state pays the first $50 deductible amount and submits the bill to Nationwide, which administers the federal funds for that portion of medicare.

Main said the only difficulty encountered with optometrists was that some had signed themselves as "doctors," and found their bills being confused with those of physicians.

A standard billing form was mailed last week to optometrists throughout the state, Main said, and it should result in speedier payment.

He said his office paid medicare bills in February totaling $95,000 for 2,756 clients.

The Welfare Department will pay out $8 million in the first quarter of 1967 for all types of health care for its clients, up from $7.6 million in the last quarter of 1966.
